Helen Wills and John L. John D., Jr., and Dante In Stovepipe Hat The Jewish Pageant

—By Arthur Brisbane—

HELEN JACOBS defeats Helen Wills Moody at tennis, a feat comparing favorably with that of Joshua stopping the sun in its supposed trip around the earth.

John L. Sullivan's defeat by Corbett at New Orleans was like the defeat of Napoleon by Wellington. The real Napoleon was not present at Waterloo and the real Sullivan was not in the ring with Corbett. Had he been there, Mr. Corbett would not have remained.

Sullivan said: "I am glad I was beaten by an American." Helen Wills Moody, specializing a little more, may say: "I am glad I was beaten by a California girl."

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., urging Americans to back the NRA and the President, says: "We found ourselves at the crossroads, hesitant and uncertain as to which road to take." Mr. Rockefeller reminds you, without intending it, of the first lines of Dante's Inferno.

Del mezzo del cammin di nostra vita
Mi ritrovai per una selva oscura,
Che la diretta via era smarrita.

Which means that Dante, middle-aged when he began his moral work, found himself "in the middle of the road of life," in an obscure forest, with the straight road not clear.

Mr. Rockefeller speaks in well-deserved praise of President Roosevelt, who, according to Mr. Rockefeller, says: "I do not pretend to know all the roads, but I know something about them. I may take some wrong turnings, and we may have to retrace our steps at times, but if you will trust me and follow me and all keep together, I will lead you out."

Mr. Rockefeller and his assistants, including some of the ablest business men in America, believe that NRA will succeed. That should encourage others.

Five more have recently been beheaded in Germany, the most "picturesque" executions taking place at Torgau, where a widow, Emma Thieme, was beheaded with two men who had killed her own son at her request.

The executioner cut off each head with only one blow of his axe and, in accordance with German custom, which sometimes requires statesmen to wear "full dress" in the morning, the executioner was adorned with "stovepipe hat" and "swallow tail coat."

It may comfort a ghost, arrived at the other end of the journey, and haunted with being a murderer, to say: "Yes, but my head was cut off by a man with a stovepipe hat." Ghosts from other countries can't say that.

Governor Lehman of New York, and Samuel Untermyer, able lawyer, are chairmen of a Jewish pageant, "The Romance of a People," to be presented on Sept. 14. You wonder at the announcement 62,200 singers, actors and dancers will "portray 4000 years of Jewish history."

Actors, singers and dancers have had little to do with the real greatness of the Jewish race, except, perhaps, David, when he danced before the Ark. The best Jewish pageant would show Heine writing his poems; Disraeli fighting down the stupid contempt of British Tories, becoming their prime minister, and justifying his prediction: "Some day you will listen to me"; Spinoza, working through a life of poverty, on the largest problems that confront the human intellect; Maimonides, greatest of the Jewish scholars, who if he came here might write a new 1933 "GUIDE TO THE PERPLEXED" and, possibly, the 600 Jews that died by fire in one day, refusing to save their lives by denying their religion.

Aviation makes steady progress. Pan-American Airways will spend at once $3,250,000 for bigger, more powerful passenger ships.

Airplane travel now costs 6.1 cents a mile. In 1926 it was 12 cents a mile.

When the Diesel engine airplane is perfected, airpine travel at one cent a mile will show a profit and you will go from the Atlantic to the Pacific, or from New York to London, in one day for $3. Remember the prediction. You will probably live to see it realized.

The Rt. Rev. William Mercer Green, bishop coadjutor of the diocese of Southern Mississippi, thinks this country has placed too much confidence in "those from the masses" during the last 200 years, and says, "leaders were born, never made."

No worm should argue with a bishop, but it may be pointed out that when the country relied on such samples of "the masses" as Benjamin Franklin, Abraham Lincoln, Thomas A. Edison and Henry Ford they made no serious mistake.

Fear Nurse 'Key' Witness Is Kidnaped

CAMBRIDGE WOMAN LEFT HOME WITH THREE MEN

Hunt Mrs. Croucher, Wanted in Exeter Death Mystery

By ARTHUR J. QUINN
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent.

Exeter, N. H., Aug. 28—Evidence indicating that a wealthy widow sought as key witness in the murder of Mrs. Louise Bostell Palmer, "flapper grandma," was kidnaped Saturday from her home in Cambridge, Mass., was under investigation by authorities here and in that city today.

Search was instituted when Mrs. Elizabeth Croucher, 60, of Otis st., Cambridge, widow of a wealthy realtor and owner of a Stratham, N. H., hotel, failed to return here for questioning regarding her friendship with Alfred Teixriran, 34, the barber held as a suspect in the Palmer slaying.

Police Chief Thomas Chrysler said Cambridge authorities had unearthed evidence indicating Mrs. Croucher left her home in that city Saturday morning, against her will, with three men who called for her.

SEARCH CITY FOR WOMAN

Chief Chrysler said the evidence against Teixriran would either stand or fall on Mrs. Croucher's story and that statements she made when questioned last Thursday—and released on her promise to return Saturday for further questioning—had been found to be conflicting upon investigation.

A letter written by the barber suspect to a sister, but apparently never mailed, was found at Mrs. Croucher's hotel. In it the barber referred to himself as "king," and Mrs. Coucher as "queen," and of

Runaway Calf Shot in Brighton Chase

A calf headed for the Brighton abbatoir as potential veal arrived with its post-mortem qualities fully developed today after leading police on a one-hour chase through Watertown and Brighton.

It leaped from a farm truck in Arsenal st., Watertown, trampled gardens and broke fences in a dash through Washington ave., and finally was shot behind the Metropolitan Driving Club stables by Patrolman Patrick J. Burke.

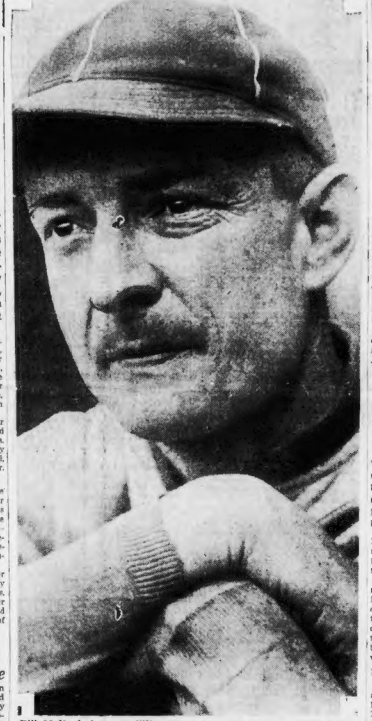
Braves' Boss'll Sign Up for 4 More Flags

PLANES HERALD DRIVE FOR NRA



Bill McKechnie, now filling the role of "wonder man" of the rampaging Braves, will affix his signature to a new four-year contract tomorrow, or in the next few days, McKechnie has made good his pledge to Judge Fuchs to produce a pennant contender within four years of the time he signed up in October, 1929. Now he and the happy judge are ready to do it again—and again for four years. There will be no argument about salary, the best guessers say. Manager Bill is supposed to get $15,000 or so a year, plus the "security" pact he asked and got four years ago. (Details in Austen Lake's Sport Page Column.)

BEAR BOSTON PLEDGE TO PRESIDENT

Eagle Screams

How Massachusetts started the NRA Consumers' Drive.

Three planes fly to Summer White House, where President Roosevelt gets Massachusetts' message.

Mass meeting of 1500 volunteer workers in Faneuil Hall hear Charles Francis Adams and other speakers.

Radio report to the President at 9:30 p. m., at which time Gov. Ely will plead for NRA.

Twenty-one guns boom Presidential salute on Boston Common; special ceremonies at Braves Field.

President Roosevelt himself took part in Massachusetts' big NRA consumers' campaign, which got under way at noon today.

In a message from the Summer White House in Hyde Park, N. Y., to NRA headquarters here, he said he would be on his lawn to receive the message carried to him from Boston by three National Guard planes.

The ships took off from the East Boston airport at noon to drop a note on the presidential lawn, informing the Chief Executive that the drive is underway.

The 700-mile flight, under command of Col. Louis E. Boutell, 26th Division air officer, was just one of the many devices that marked the start of the drive to get every consumer in Massachusetts behind the Blue Eagle by signing a pledge to patronize only merchants in whose windows the bird flies.

PRESIDENTIAL SALUTE

While the planes were taking off at East Boston a battery of the 101st Field Artillery, Massachusetts National Guard, fired the 21-gun presidential salute on Boston Common. In charge of the gunners were Brig.-Gen. Needham, head of the state police, who saw service in the 51st Field Artillery.

At the same time, more than 1500 volunteer workers, loaned to the Recovery Board by various Boston firms, gathered in Faneuil Hall to hear Charles Francis Adams, former Secretary of the Navy, spur

America's Most Effective Arm of Defense

GOVERNMENTAL ignorance and indifference, political stupidity and cupidity, are tending to drive the best men out of our national airplane corps and reducing that arm of service to a level far below that of ALL other important nations.

In fact, the government airplane service, the most essential and most effective arm of the nation's defense and safety, has become the sport of petty politicians.

In addition to an equipment of planes greatly inferior in number, speed and quality to that of other nations, the government is now endeavoring to create through bad pay and bad treatment a service of pilots equally inferior.

Commercial airplane companies are as a general proposition more progressive in equipment and management than the government.

But they, too, are unappreciative of the importance of developing a service of pilots of the very first class.

As a matter of fact, commercial airplane companies can be made by government, and should be made, to furnish a thoroughly adequate reserve in planes and pilots for the governmental service of national defense.

BUT commercial airplane companies, like the government, are disposed to treat pilots badly and to pay them poorly, thus depriving this service and this force in reserve for national defense of the best possible personnel.

A fatuous policy of this kind not only shows little consideration for the comfort and safety of the passengers, but in the last analysis shows as little appreciation of the fullest possibilities of development in the whole program of commercial aviation.

And finally, it displays a lack of sympathy in the patriotic plan of co-operation with the government for purposes of national defense.

If the government had an intelligent policy with regard to its own airplane forces, it would be in a better position to compel a liberal policy on the part of the airplane companies.

If the government were far-seeing with respect to the importance of airplane development to the nation, commercially and governmentally, it could immensely encourage airplane manufacture, airplane lines of transport and travel, and general extension of the use of airplanes, and an air-minded attitude on the part of the whole public.

The government has at its service not only the purchasing power and patronage which could be employed in creating a thoroughly modern air force and one adequate for the defense of this great nation, but the opportunity for inducing the most skillful and most courageous and most patriotic of our younger citizens to enter into and to remain

HULTMAN'S OUSTER TO BE URGED

BULLETIN

Gov. Ely will be requested to remove Police Commissioner Hultman and his legal adviser, Leo Schwartz, early next week by City Councillor John I. Fitzgerald of the West End, Fitzgerald announced today.

Commr. Hultman announced late today that he would leave a sub-station in the West End in place of the abandoned Station 3.

The fight to prevent Police Commissioner Hultman from scrapping Station 3, Joy st., West End, was carried to the Massachusetts Supreme Court today.

A writ of mandamus against the police commissioner was asked by City Councillor John I. Fitzgerald of the West End. The matter comes up Wednesday before Judge Henry T. Lummus.

A law passed by the legislature in 1797 is cited by Atty. James I. Toffa, representing Fitzgerald. This, according to the lawyer, requires the establishment of a station in the West End "for the nightly watch."

OFFERS THEM BLINKERS

Besides claiming that abandonment of station 3 is illegal, the petition asking for the writ of mandamus asserts that there is no justification for the change either on grounds of economy or efficiency.

Shortly before the petition was filed in the Supreme Court, Commissioner Hultman met a committee from the West End and urged them to accept a police box blinker system as a substitute for the station.

He half promised to maintain a sub-station, with an ambulance and a few men, during installation of the blinkers, which are Hultman's pet substitute for the proved efficiency of police radio.

The committee of West Enders left the conference to inspect blinkers in operation in Division 1, North End.

The abandonment of Station 3, West End, was ordered by Hultman when he transferred Capt. James R. Claflin to Division 4, South End. He ordered the West End taken over by Stations 1 and 2. This removed the necessity of appointing a new captain, something he has avoided for many months because he does not like the men at the head of the civil service list.

SEE PERIL TO POLICE

The writ of mandamus, if granted, will force the police head to keep Station 3 in operation.

The petition cites that the West End and Beacon Hill have 75,000 to 100,000 residents and for ten years the district has been the busiest, or second busiest, police division.

"To abandon Station 3 would bring forth serious impairment of police protection in the district."

In spite of today's tentative plan for replacing Station 3 with blinker lights, it is expected that a protest will come to the fore again when Beacon Hill property owners return from vacation. Many have not yet learned of the abandonment of the station in their district.

Both sides avoided any announcement of the results of the conference in the commissioner's office, pending the proposed inspection of the blinkers elsewhere.

Representing the West End and Beacon Hill district at the meeting were Geo. J. Leary, 18 Temple st.; Hugh J. Kiernan, 113 Chambers st.; Irving Seigel, 73 Allen st.; Joseph F. Doherty, 63 Joy st.; W. W. Remick, 14 Irving st.; Abraham Levine, 55 North Russell st., and Arthur Rabinovitz of Chambers st. They spoke for various organizations.

Late News Bulletins

SHOE WORKERS STRIKE IN BROCKTON

Brockton, Aug. 28 (AP)—Operations in two shoe factories employing 225 employes were disrupted today by refusal of employes to work after several fellow-workers had been discharged for failure to pay union dues. Both companies, the Stacy, Adams and the M. A. Packard, have agreements with the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union.

WOMAN BACK OF RUM THREAT

A woman, said to be the sister of a rum-runner, caused all the furore in Scituate over a threat to kidnap and beat up Deputy United States Marshal George R. Murphy, the Boston Evening American learned today.

The woman "is known," according to United States Customs Officer George M. Murphy, and may be summoned to the federal building here to tell what she knows about rum-running and the rum-runners' feud in Scituate, growing out of finding $60,000 worth of liquor aboard the rum craft Pueblo.

Customs Officer Murphy admitted today that it was he and not his namesake in Scituate who took part in the raid and arrest of 18 alleged rum runners last week.

Rockefeller Grandson Is on Boston Job, but Where?

Young Winthrop Rockefeller, 21, grandson of John D. Rockefeller, started his first day of work today with the Colonial Beacon Oil Co. —but his whereabouts were a mystery.

The scion of the oil millions was somewhere out along the chain of company plants and filling stations, with his mentor, Carroll E. French, director of personnel for Colonial Beacon.

From a toiler in the oil fields of Texas, Rockefeller has become a white collar worker here in learning the oil business thoroughly from the ground up.

According to French's secretary, young Rockefeller is sitting in on industrial relations conferences with representatives of the workers, the hearings and conferences throughout the state now being numerous because of problems arising out of the NRA code.

Whether young Rockefeller and French were being guarded against any possible attempts to kidnap the wealthy youth the personal man's secretary professed not to know.

Rockefeller arrived in Providence last Friday and came to Boston from there over the road. None of the company officials would admit today they knew where he is stopping, but they denied he is staying at the French home in Newton Center.

CLAFLIN ORDERS POLICE TO CLEAN UP SOUTH END RACKETS

GAMBLING LID IS CLAMPED ON DIVISION 4 BY CAPTAIN

Tells Men Crime Must Go, or They Are Not Wanted; King Takes Office as Super, Livingston as Deputy

Police Capt. James R. Claflin, new head of Division 4, South End, today demanded 100 per cent efficiency from the rank and file against criminals and racketeers.

As Martin H. King stepped into his new duties as superintendent, and William W. Livingston as deputy superintendent in charge of divisions, Claflin signalized his assumption of leadership of "the world's busiest police station," by declaring at rollcall:

"As for slot machines and other gaming devices, places reported to for gambling, liquor joints and houses of ill repute, if any exist in this division they must go."

"GET 'EM OR GO"

"I'll expect all you policemen to be thorough in your methods, to know thieves and racketeers, and the various means of driving them out of business.

"If you don't possess these qualifications, you don't belong at this station. This is the world's busiest police station, with 15,000 arrests a year.

"No laziness or indifference will be tolerated. It is your duty to drive out the crooks and there won't be any restrictions on arrests of their kind. Go right ahead and arrest them.

"Nobody's immune. In the case of criminals and other racketeers, I expect you to meet force with force. But in contacting respectable people, you'll have to use courtesy and give prompt and efficient service.

BAN ON DRINKING

"One thing I won't tolerate is a drunken policeman. If you drink on duty it will prove costly to you. If you get into trouble through liquor, don't expect any help from me.

"You have a new superintendent and I want you to do your utmost to make his administration a success. As for Deputy Supt. Livingston, he has been your commander and you know what he demands. You've got to toe the mark.

"Later I may make changes, when I get to know the division and the men in it. There'll be no favoritism. Selections will be on merit."

When Supt. King stepped into the late Supt. Michael H. Crowley's office shortly after 8 o'clock, he found the roll top desk locked. It was the first time in years anybody had seen the top down. Somebody had locked it over the week-end and it took a locksmith to open it.

Great Religions Ask World Peace

Chicago, Aug. 28 (INS)—Representatives of great religions at the World Parliament today joined in a united appeal for universal peace.

Christian, Jew, Confucian, Hindu, Buddhist, Mohammedan, Sikh and Taoist set aside age-old differences and issued a "decoded" religion understandable to modern man.

August 27, anniversary of the signing of the Briand-Kellogg pact, was named as International Peace Day.

Watertown Father of Five Hangs Self

Patrick J. Mehir, 56, widower and father of five children, hanged himself by a window cord from a rafter in the cellar of his home, 49 Water st., Watertown, today. His wife died two years ago. Recently, his children told authorities, he had been despondent because of a transfer to harder work by the company for whom he worked.

4 Arrested in NRA Drive on Communists

New York, Aug. 28 (AP)—Four persons, alleged Communist picketts, were arrested in Brooklyn today and charged with violation of the NRA regulations in a test case designed to determine the validity of such prosecutions, police headquarters was informed.

The arrests followed a statement last week by Grover A. Whalen, city NRA chairman, that Communists were trying to block the NRA program.

NEW POLICE HEADS ON JOB WITH WARNING TO GANGS

"KING OF THE POLICE"

Superintendent of Police Martin H. King at the desk in headquarters where "Mike" Crowley sat for many, many years. The new "super" took over the job today.

HE'S TO KEEP POLICE ON TOES

Deputy Supt. of Police W. W. Livingston, who is in the job where he has direct control over all divisions. He is known as one of the bravest of Boston police.

36 Worcester Pike Speeders in Court

Appearing against 36 motorists summoned for speeding on the Worcester turnpike in Newton, Motorcycle Officer Alfred W. Hammell told Judge Weston it is impossible to watch the attempts of women and children trying to cross the highway while the cars whizz past. Two of the offenders were fined $25, 20 were fined $5 each and the cases of the others were continued.

8 Pedestrians in Auto Death Toll

Autos took a toll of 18 lives in Massachusetts last week, according to Registrar Morgan T. Ryan, who laid the blame at the doors of "speedsters who will not take time to live."

The auto deaths included eight pedestrians, nine occupants of cars, and one bicycle rider, bringing the total for this year to 517 in comparison with 496 last year at the same time.

PITTMAN SEEN AS 'SUCCESSOR' TO MOLEY

Senator No. 1 Adviser to Roosevelt in the Debt Parleys

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, Aug. 28 (INS)—The resignation of Prof. Raymond Moley as assistant secretary of state led to considerable speculation today as to who is to become President Roosevelt's No. 1 adviser in foreign affairs.

Moley has occupied that position to an unusual degree for more than a year. A pronounced nationalist, he has been credited with greatly influencing the Roosevelt international policy.

The natural answer to the question of successor would be Secretary of State Cordell Hull, who is as sincere in internationalism as Moley is in nationalism. Yet belief prevails that when time comes to negotiate the debts Mr. Roosevelt will have other counsel.

In this connection Senator Key Pittman of Nevada, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, is prominently mentioned.

Of all the statesmen in the London economic conference, Pittman was the only one, with the exception of M. Litvinoff, the Russian, who emerged with anything tangible to show for his labors. This was the silver agreement to which Pittman devoted all of his efforts.

Moreover, Pittman entertains many of the same views that Moley does on international policy. Both are strongly against debt cancellation. Both are convinced American recovery must be worked out at home, irrespective of international considerations.

There is a bond of real affection between Mr. Roosevelt and Secretary Hull, but it is an open secret that their views on international policy do not always coincide.

The American delegates to the London conference, Senator Pittman excepted, have been "gunning" for Moley ever since his dramatic dash across the Atlantic.

It has been incorrectly reported that Moley negotiated the famous stabilization agreement which called forth from President Roosevelt the equally famous rebuke to the conference which almost wrecked it. Moley's only part in it was to agree, at Ramsay MacDonald's insistence, to transmit it to the White House. Mr. Roosevelt rejected it curtly, and Moley privately applauded as much as the other American delegates there.

Washington, Aug. 28 (INS)—The Roosevelt administration will suffer no shortage of professorial "brains" despite the resignation of Prof. Raymond Moley, long known as the No. 1 man in the so-called brain trust.

Popular opinion has always accorded Prof. Rexford G. Tugwell as being No. 2, and Tugwell will carry on as assistant secretary of agriculture. He is credited with having a large hand in the shaping of the administration's new agricultural policy.

LABOR TO FIGHT OPEN SHOP IN AUTO CODE

Court Battle Looms When Any Violations Come to Light

Washington, Aug. 28 (AP)—Labor provisions in the automobile competitive code just promulgated by President Roosevelt bid fair to be tested in the courts.

An official of organized labor informed reporters today the position of the American Federation remained that certain stipulations on relations between employes and employers should not have been left in the code.

Describing the victory of auto manufacturers as probably the first step by industrialists to have the same wording inserted in all codes, the labor speaker intimated that as soon as cases believed to be violations of the law are found, court action would be begun.

The paragraph, protested repeatedly by the labor advisory board of the recovery administration, stated that its provisions did not constitute any nullification of the law giving employes the right to organize without restraint from their employers and to bargain collectively.

It provided, however, that the employers would retain the right to hire, promote and discharge workers on the basis of individual merit and without regard to affiliation with any organization.

Non-union bituminous coal operators are planning to seek similar phrasing for their code to take the place of a provision submitted originally announcing an intention to continue open shop operations.

The possibility of new opposition from labor came to the front as Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, turned his attention to bringing the coal industry into an agreement. Johnson has indicated that unless "the interminable discussions" end soon in an agreement he will write a code and impose it upon the industry.

Moley Disclaims Rift With President

New York, Aug. 28 (INS)—Prof. Raymond Moley, erstwhile dean of the Roosevelt "brain trust," today denied emphatically that any rift between the President and himself caused his resignation to assume the editorship of a new political weekly, in support of the new deal, to be published by Vincent Astor.

Moley said his report on time and racketeering, to which the President assigned him some time ago, would be ready Sept. 15 and 20.

"That will be after my resignation as Assistant Secretary of State has taken effect," he said, "but it is understood I shall complete the report. I have all the material at hand."

Suffern, N. Y., Aug. 28—Isaiah G. Elder, 79, retired postmaster of Brunswick, Me., died of a fractured skull last night after being struck by an auto.

24th State to Vote on Repeal

Anti-prohibitionists, having tucked Texas away in their fold, turned their attention today to the State of Washington, which votes on repeal tomorrow.

Texas, home of Senator Morris Sheppard, often called the "father of the Eighteenth Amendment," voted by a majority of 114,000 on Saturday to wipe the amendment from the constitution. The Lone Star State was the 23d in a row to approve repeal.

If Washington follows the example the repeal drive will be two-thirds of the way to its goal.

J. C. Herhuman of Seattle, head of his state association for repeal, said there was "grave danger" of a prohibition victory unless repealists record a heavy vote. He charged the legislature failed to provide for an expression of the "will of the majority" in providing for a referendum in 48 legislative districts instead of the state at large.

Wish I Had $1000, Says Jim Roosevelt

"James Roosevelt has been signed for the air—at $1000 per"—wrote one of those New York columnists today.

"I wish I had," sighed James Roosevelt at his desk in a Boston insurance office where he is working much harder than radio stars for much less money.

"I don't know where that comes from," he mused, referring to the columnist's short line. "There's nothing to it. It's all wet."

The President's son does a New England broadcast over Station WNAC once a week. His subjects are almost entirely of a non-political nature.

Gas Station Robbed by Bold R. I. Thief

Providence, R. I., Aug. 27—An unarmed man took $40 from the cash register of a gasoline filling station on heavily-travelled Elmwood ave., broke away from the attendant when the latter grabbed him, and escaped.

The man walked into the station and took the money from the cash register while the attendant was filling an auto tank.

Hail Damages Papal Villa

Rome, Aug. 28 (INS)—A sudden rain and hail storm caused considerable damage at the papal villa at Castel Gandolfo near Rome today. Sixty feet of wall were undermined.

DETROIT BANKS FACE CRIMINAL INVESTIGATION

Books of Union Guardian, Union Trust to Be Examined

Detroit, Aug. 28 (AP)—Judge Harry B. Keidan, sitting as Detroit's one-man bank investigating jury, said today he would order conservators of the Union Guardian Trust Co. and the Detroit Trust Co. to examine the books of their institutions to determine whether or not there have been criminal acts in conduct or management.

The action, he said, follows the testimony of Sen. James Couzens (R.) Mich., before the jury that the Union Guardian Trust Co. "looksyed" the $10,000,000 children's fund of Michigan which the senator founded out of $200,000, and that the closed First National Bank, Detroit, and the Detroit Trust Co. "switched" funds in order to increase their respective cash positions.

The judge said that the conservators of the two institutions were appointed by the circuit court, and the order to them to perform the examination will be the same as though the grand jury carried out the investigation.

Arthur J. Lacy, attorney for Sen. Couzens and for the Detroit Trust Co., on the stand today, testified that so far as he has been able to learn, there has been no criminal action in the conduct of the trust company. Lacy said one of the chief obstacles to the federal government in reorganizing the closed First National Bank-Detroit and the Guardian National Bank of Commerce, specific objects of inquiry by the jury, was the submission by local leaders of numerous plans of reorganization, all of which left out any provisions for assessment of stockholders.

Wilson W. Mills, former chairman of the board of the First National, charged by the Rev. Father Charles A. Coughlin, militant priest, with presenting false reports of the bank's condition, today requested permission to return to the witness stand following Lacy.

Previously Mills testified that failure of the Union Guardian Trust Co. to obtain a loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corp. caused the Michigan bank holiday.

THIS desirable result cannot be accomplished through indifference and neglect in the matter of governmental equipment and organization, nor through bad treatment and poor pay with respect to the personnel.

It must be accomplished through the highest scientific supervision of the Department of Aviation, through intelligent expenditure, through efficient organization, and adequate compensation.

Governmental standards should be imposed upon private aviation enterprise.

The government has its codes and its contracts with which to compel adherence to high standards on the part of the private airplane companies.

Let the government use the airplane code to compel the highest efficiency on the part of pilots, and considerate treatment and adequate compensation of pilots on the part of the airplane companies.

Let the government employ the airplane mail contracts not only to establish proper treatment of pilots as an essential requirement, but to secure the establishment in private enterprise of such a high standard of efficiency that this corps of trained and competent men will always be able to furnish an arm of effective defense to the nation in case of need.

These foresighted measures are the duty of the government in the protection of its people.

BUT it is the duty of the people to see that the government performs this duty

A democratic form of government has frequently failed in its international relations and national obligations because its politicians have little vision.

Their minds are concentrated on matters of domestic consequence and immediate moment.

Their interests are local interests, sectional interests. They do not think nationally.

They are concerned with the limited requirements of a limited constituency.

They do not consider sufficiently the necessities of the future.

They lack broad vision, clear vision, foresight and farsight.

In fact, it has been said that democracy is like a man riding backwards in a train. It never sees anything until it is past.

However, this need not be the case.

The national defense, even in a democracy, should be beyond the wrecking reach or narrow-minded, shortsighted politicians.

There should be a policy, a precedent, a system, and an organization established, which would be safe from the contaminating touch of pork-barrel politics.

IN a republic, everything depends upon the intelligent and patriotic purpose of the people.

Theirs is the power, theirs is the obligation.

The American people must think nationally and patriotically.

The American people must create high ideals and establish high standards in national policy and procedure, and especially in matters of national defense.

The American people must, and surely can, make their politicians live up to these high ideals and standards.

A politician will do anything to keep his job, —even become a patriot.

In a republic all the people need to do to get GOOD government is to show their capacity for SELF government.

SUICIDE PACT FOUND SIGNED BY BABY'S SLAYER AND WIFE

FATHER TRIES TO KILL SELF IN HIS CELL

Autopsy Shows Little Girl Attacked and Then Murdered

Clifton W. Cunningham, who killed his three-year-old daughter in Beverly Saturday, and his wife had entered into an agreement to kill themselves, Beverly police announced today.

A note indicating a suicide pact was found in the purse of Mrs. Anne Cunningham, who is soon to become a mother again, police said.

Addressed "To Whom It May Concern," it told of domestic trouble caused by relatives and of an agreement whereby Mrs. Cunningham and her husband would end their lives.

TRIES SUICIDE IN CELL

The note indicated the couple planned to send little Shirley Anne, the daughter slain by her father at Humming Rock Beach, to Mrs. Cunningham's brother in Rockport.

The disclosure came soon after Cunningham attempted to end his life in his police cell at Beverly when an autopsy showed his claim that he killed the child in a frenzy of mercy was untrue. The autopsy showed a criminal attack. Cunningham had said he beat his daughter's head against a ledge until she died after she had fallen over a cliff and had been seriously injured. A broken neck and fractured skull were among her injuries.

Cunningham borrowed a gun a month ago, police determined. But he had no bullets for it.

Just before dawn Cunningham sought to commit suicide by beating his head against his cell door. Police said he again cried out that he ha* killed his daughter after she had fallen from a seawall to rocks below. He found her writhing in agony, he said, and battered her head against the stones to end her suffering.

HELD WITHOUT BAIL.

When he appeared before Judge George B. Searsbe entered a plea of not guilty through his attorney, William H. McSweeney.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Charles A. Green announced that he was not ready to proceed with the case at this time, and asked for a 10-day continuance. The case, therefore, will be called again on Sept. 7.

Meanwhile, Cunningham was ordered held without bail.

Despite Cunningham's arraignment, authorities today planned to have him examined by alienists. They believe he is the victim of a mental disorder.

H. H. ROGERS IN THIRD BRIDAL

New York, Aug. 28 (INS)—Col. Henry Huddleston Rogers, Standard Oil millionaire and Mrs. Pauline Van Der Voort Dresser were married at Southampton, L. I., today. Their engagement, which took society by surprise, was announced two weeks ago.

Friends of Col. Rogers explained he is anxious to join his daughter, Millicent and her husband, Arturo Ramos, who are abroad with their children.

The wedding, which was Col. Rogers' third, took place at noon. Mrs. Dresser was given in marriage by her father, Charles R. Van Der Voort, of Jamestown, N. Y. Henry Huddleston Rogers, Jr., acted as his father's best man. Mrs. Dresser's sons, Charles Van Der Voort Dresser and Bradley Sherman Dresser, were the only others present.

Col. and Mrs. Rogers will sail abroad on Wednesday.

Girl's Plaint Jails 'Andy Callahan's Kin

Lawrence, Aug. 28—William Callahan, 24, brother of Andy Callahan the boxer, and Michael Burgeil, 26, both local men, were arrested here today charged with criminal attack upon an unidentified 18-year-old girl at Salem, N. H., Saturday night.

The girl, police said, is a Lawrence girl who attended a Canobie Lake dance. A third man is being sought.

IF DOROTHY COONAN TOOK $100,000 INSURANCE ON 182 FRECKLES =

NEW FILM STAR MUST BE FRECKLED

HOW MUCH INSURANCE would ANTHONY AUCELLA NEED?

MUCH FRECKLED REVERE BOY

Maybe Dorothy Coonan, a new movie star, is lucky that she hasn't the number of freckles owned by Anthony Aucella, of Revere. Maybe she isn't—for freckles means a job for this new movie actress. If Dorothy needs a freckled co-star we are nominating the Revere boy, shown here. For this lad has freckles. Count 'em! Every one of the Coonan girl's freckles —numbering 182—are worth money. If she should lose them all she would be without a job in pictures—for recently she was offered long term contract—that is good as long as her face is well freckled. You'll see her soon on screen.

PLANES HUNT 3 LOST AT SEA

On orders direct from President Roosevelt, Coast Guard planes and water craft battled fog and haze along the Atlantic seaboard today for a trace of three sons of wealthy New York neighbors of the President.

The three left Manasquan, N. J., a week ago yesterday in the 32-foot cutter Posterpit, intent on reaching Nantucket. Northeast storms swept the Atlantic since and fears for the safety of the boys grew with every hour.

One of the missing boys, owner of the craft, is Pierre P. Irving, a Harvard junior, son of L. DuPont Irving, New York stock broker, and descendent of Washington Irving. He is 21 years old.

With him were John L. Niles, 23 and his brother, Charles L. Niles, 16, sons of Dr. Walter L. Niles of East 64th st., New York City. Both the Irvings and Niles families live near the town house of President Roosevelt.

4 Nuns Die, Novices Ill of Typhoid Fever

Montreal, Aug. 28 (AP)—The 26 novices suffering from typhoid fever at the Mother House of the Sisters of the Congregation of Notre Dame, were recovering today.

Since the outbreak was first noted at the Mother House there have been four deaths, ascribed to the epidemic among the nuns.

JESSIE VISITS ART COLONY

Mrs. Jessie B. Costello, whose engagement at a New York theater was suddenly cancelled Saturday, spent the weekend with friends at Weston, Ct.

During her stay she attended a party at the artist colony there and then motored with her friends to Compo Beach at Westport.

The raven-haired widow, whose trial on charges of murdering her husband won her public attention, deplored the many cancellations of public appearances in which she had hoped to obtain the funds for support of herself and three children.

"I have learned that Dr. George Burgess Magrath, the criminologist, received $4200 from the state to testify against me. Since I was found innocent and the trial cost me much money I feel justified in accepting any contracts that will help me support my three fatherless children," she said.

New York Suspends Trust Law for NRA

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 28 (AP)—New York state suspended its anti-trust law today to permit full operation of the National Recovery Act within the state's borders. Gov. Lehman signed a bill passed by the legislature to permit the suspension for the duration of the national act.

SUBWAY MEANS WORK FOR 3000, SAYS CURLEY

600 Cheer as Mayor Pleads With State Board for Approval

Nearly 600 men and women crowded into Gardiner Auditorium of the State House cheered enthusiastically today as Mayor Curley, supported by other notables, argued before the State Emergency Finance Board for approval of the $8,500,000 Huntington ave. subway project.

Approval of the project and the resulting federal aid, he said, would mean that for three years 3000 men would be employed, resulting practically in wiping out the present Soldiers' Relief list in Boston.

As the Governor sp. project was being completed, the mayor declared, the city was expending $320,000 a year on soldiers' relief, but six months after completion of the work, the annual relief had jumped to a rate of about $1,000,000, due to inability of the veterans to procure other work.

SAVE $4,700,000

"This project in Huntington ave.," said the mayor, "will result now in a saving of $2,500,000 a year in soldiers' relief. However, I'm not so much concerned with the saving as I am with preserving the self-respect of these men whom we called upon in a time of great emergency to save the nation.

"The government will contribute 30 per cent to this project, or about $2,600,000. What we will save on soldiers' relief and what the government contributes will amount actually to about $4,700,000.

"As for the NRA, every right-thinking citizen wants to see the present courageous leader, President Roosevelt, succeed in his work of saving the nation. Hoover had the best of intentions, but he was totally lacking in leadership to lead the nation out of the depression.

WITHIN 48 HOURS

"The one way to get out of the depression is through work and wages and this job provides the amount, as the men will be taken from the civil service list and the veterans will be given preference.

"All the ballyhoo in Massachusetts will put less men to work than this single proposition."

Col. Charles R. Gow, engineer for the federal board, the Fuller Commission, sat in with the State emergency board during the hearing.

Col. Thomas Sullivan, chairman of the Boston Transit Commission, told the board that work on the Huntington ave. subway can begin 48 hours after approval.

By Gen. Edward L. Logan, of the Boston Metropolitan Transit District Trustees, it was declared that this organization approves.

Henry I. Harriman, chairman of the Elevated trustees, said they believe "the project is thoroughly justified up to Gainsboro st. now, and eventually to Brookline Village."

James T. Moriarty, president of the State Federation of Labor, and James Rose, past State Commander of the American Legion, also expressed approval.

5 Americans Seek Fair Spanish Trial

Palma, Mallorca, Aug. 28 (AP)—Five Americans including Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Lockwood of Springfield, Mass., and E. W. Blodgett of Stamford, Conn., accused of assaulting a civil guard, released on bail July 20, appealed today to the American consul-general at Barcelona, asking him to speed their trial and to protest against the "strong charges" preferred against them by the military authorities.

The Americans asserted that Mallorca officials were making the charges stronger because of resentment at the intervention of Premier Manuel Azana, of Spain, on whose instructions they were granted bail after six weeks in jail.

Warrant for Girl Ignoring Summons

A warrant for the arrest of Mabel McGourty, 24, of Parker st., Newton Center, was issued by Judge Allen in Newton court today after he was informed she defied Patrolman Joseph Lyons, who had served her with a summons for using a car without authority.

Police officers told court Miss McGourty said she wouldn't appear. She was the driver of a car in a collision last Wednesday and Thomas G. Curry of Quint ave., her host, told police she had no permission to take it.

'KEEP AWAY FROM MY DOOR'

Rev. John J. Callan shown at "Deamondene," the Wellesley estate he deeded to his wife, which he now refuses to leave. (Boston American photo.)

CALLAN DEFIES COURT, HOLDS WIFE'S HOME

"Only Law Higher Than Judge Burns to Move Me," He Says

Court orders to the contrary, John J. Callan, former rector of a smart Wellesley Hills church and ex-husband of Mrs. Mary Hemenway Callan, a niece of Bishop Lawrence, today declared that he would not leave Deamondene, the 21-acre estate in Cartwright rd., Wellesley, that he deeded to his former wife.

When Mrs. Callan, who is spending the summer at Manchester-by-the-Sea, was informed of the former clergyman's defiance, she simply said that it was a matter for her lawyers, not for her.

"I'm not even going to telephone my attorney," she said.

And Edward F. McClennen, her counsel is away from his office on vacationing somplace where it is difficult to disturb him.

Callan, meanwhile, is enjoying himself at Deamondene with his two daughters, Isabell and Evelyn. And he insists that he is going to do so until some court higher than that of Suffolk Superior Judge John J. Burns tells him to get out. The eviction order is now on appeal.

Callan contends that he transferred the estate to his wife, not as an outright gift, but as security for money he borrowed from her father, the late Augustus Hemenway.

The couple gained much publicity during their divorce battle, two years ago.

$165,000,000 in New Financing Passed

Washington, Aug. 28—A total of 134 registration statements representing more than $165,000,000 in proposed security issues were filed with the federal trade commission in the first month under the securities act.

The commission emphasized that under the law filing of a registration statement in no case gave to any security the approval of the commission, indicated that the commission had passed on the merits of the issue.

BAIL IS RAISED FOR SCITUATE RUM SUSPECT

Commissioner Jenney Sets $10,000 Because of Fictitious Names

Bail was increased from $1000 to $10,000 for one of the 15 Scituate liquor case defendants today by U. S. Commissioner Jenney because he twice gave false names and addresses.

All 18 defendants were held for the grand jury in connection with the seizure of $60,000 worth of liquor and the yacht Pueblos last Monday.

The seizure had a startling aftermath when threats of kidnaping and death were made to Deputy U. S. Marshal George M. Murphy, a resident of Scituate, who was erroneously suspected of giving the "tip" that led to the seizure.

When the defendants went before Commissioner Jenney today, the best dressed was a man who gave his name as Joseph Cutner, and his address as Plaza st., Chelsea.

"This man is not known at the address given," said Probation Officer Richard B. McSweeney.

"What's the real truth?" asked Commissioner Jenney.

"My name is Robert Barry and I'm a laborer," was the answer.

The commissioner demanded to see the hands and found them soft and white. The defendant then said he was Robert Barry Todd and lived in various hotels.

He was put in the cage in the marshal's office to await investigation of this statement, and was held in $10,000.

Other defendants are William Rose, New Bedford; Charles Sousa, Concord st., New Bedford; Edward Boyd, Water st., Rockland; Harry J. Miller, Main st., Brockton; William Scannell, Gannett st., Scituate; George Dwight, Hazel ave., Scituate; Joseph Retkuseail, Maplan rd., Brockton.

TEST ENTRANTS SHOW SELVES GOOD SPORTS

From all parts of New England congratulations poured into homes of Kenneth Albert Jones, Rumford, R. I., and Lorraine Lemire, Manchester, N. H., after the announcement made in the Boston Sunday Advertiser that these two fortunate youngsters had won the grand awards in the "Typical New England Boy and Girl" Competition.

And to those other 12 winners of cash prizes of $10 each there came also many words of congratulation.

And to those other 12 winners of cash prizes of $10 each, there came also many messages of congratulation. These winners were: Courtney Wilson, 57 Louders lane, Jamaica Plain, Mass.; Nathaniel Kowell, 81 Francis st., Brookline, Mass.; Robert T. Harrington, 75 Gaston st., Medford, Mass.; Phyllis MacCarthy, 5 Church st., Ware, Mass.; Ruth Cynthia Cheney, 172 Bernice ave., Woonsocket, R. I.; Albert C. Byrnes, 50 Valley st., Bristol, R. I.; Donald A. Hinton, Barton, Vt.; Winifred Gardner Springfield, Vt.; Austin J. Presley, Houlton, Me.; Constance Dumont, Lewiston, Me.; Lloyd Austin Davis, 66 Main st., Goffstown, N. H., and Helen Virginia Brown, 106 Middle rd., Portsmouth, N. H.

Nicest thing about it all was that many of the messages came from those termed "losers" in the competition, boys and girls whose photographs were entered and all of whom were seriously considered by the judges for the final awards.

One young lady who had entered sent this message to th winners, which is typical of many others received by them:

"Heartiest and most sincere congratulations. I know you will greatly enjoy your trip to the World's Fair. And all of us who entered will be interested in hearing all about your experiences. Good luck."

That is real boy and girl sportsmanship and it was exemplified many times over. There appears not to have been a "poor sport" among all of the 10,000 entrants.

Little Miss Lemire and Master Jones took their honors modestly and while they were much elated over this chance to take their parents on the big trip to the Century of Progress Exposition, they were "good winners" which is much harder, by the way, than being even a "good loser."

And both of the winners sent in their best wishes to every other boy and girl who entered. Master Kenneth said,

"I am so happy to have won. But I am sorry for those boys and girls who did not win. I want to express my thanks to the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser and to give also my best wishes to every other boy and girl who entered the competition."

And Lorraine Lemire wrote:

"It's just too great a thrill for words. I am so happy. And I want to say to all the other boys and girls that I wish they were going with us on this wonderful trip. I can never thank the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser enough."

Policeman Helps Boy to New Pants

Lansing, Minn., Aug. 28 (AP)—Palmer Erickson, 12, had a disappointment but he doesn't care. He's going to realize his ambition —to own a pair of white pants.

An officer confiscated the bogus money. He was touched by the youth's disappointment and gave him a dollar's worth of real coins.

Insull Gets Respite for 24 Hours

Athens, Aug. 28 (INS)—Immediate fate of Samuel Insull, which was to have been decided by the Greek court of appeals today, will not be learned until tomorrow.

The court hearing was postponed a day upon discovery of a technicality regarding the 24-hour period which must elapse before it can be held.

Insull was arrested Saturday. The court will pass on the prosecutor's writ under which the former American utilities magnate was arrested. The court is expected to approve it.

Narcotic Production Limited for 1st Time

Washington, Aug. 28.—A notable victory for America's aggressive international war against the dope evil was recorded today.

For the first time in history, the output of licensed narcotic factories everywhere has been restricted to the world's actual medical requirements, estimated at 16½ tons of morphine, heroin and cocaine. The legitimate demand for raw opium, from which narcotics are manufactured, has dropped 500 tons since 1929.

JAP ASSASSINS' TRIAL CLOSES

Tokio, Aug. 28 (AP)—The state began summations today in the court-martial at Yokosuka naval base of 11 officers charged with participation in the assassination last May of Premier Inukai and accompanying acts of terrorism.

Defense attorneys used as the principal theme of their pleas that American support of the London naval treaty justified the young assassins' belief that Japanese leaders' acceptance of the treaty constituted a national betrayal.

A copy of minutes of the American Senate's Foreign Relations Committee debate concerning the treaty in 1930 was presented.

The social campaign of William R. Castle, Jr., then acting American ambassador and Mrs. Castle, among highly-placed Japanese in Tokio, was cited as an example of how Japanese civilian authorities succumbed to "American diplomatic blandishments."

Old Mule Refuses to Plow Up Cotton

Hemphill, Tex., Aug. 28—Pole Mason, farmer, near Hemphill, has a mule with a disposition extraordinarily docile. For seven years he was walked between the cotton rows, careful not to trample the growing staple.

Mason made ready to start plowing up his cotton in accordance with a farm relief agreement. The old mule refused to lean against the collar and pull the plow. To date, the mule has plowed up no cotton.

some notion that the Eighteenth Amendment will be repealed, says: "We must and will start again at the very beginning and build back until we again secure national prohibition."

His best friends can only hope that Bishop Cannon will live until that day.

Human beings will eventually become sufficiently civilized not to drink whiskey, gin and other alcoholic poisons. But temperance will come through intelligence, not through force.

Some boards of health are distressed because milk drinking has diminished considerably since beer came back. This is bad for health, where it applies to children, at least, and bad for farmers. However, good light beer, in moderation, is also a food, although it has not the food value of milk. It is certainly better to have the consumption of milk reduced by beer than to have it reduced by whiskey and gin.

PIERCE HEIR TO WED DIVORCEE

New York, Aug. 28—Divorced in Chicago last Thursday, Mrs. Conky Whitehead, ex-wife of the soft drink millionaire, yesterday formally presented her next husband-to-be, Andrew Pierce 3d, scion of an aristocratic New England family.

"It'll be love in a cottage," said Mrs. Whitehead, whose father, William H. Hughes, is a millionaire Wall Street broker.

"Yes, we're both very poor—I've a job and little else," agreed young Pierce, son of the head of the American Woolen Mills.

"It was love at first sight," declared Mrs. Whitehead.

"I met Andrew at a party in the Hotel Ambassador after the Princeton-Yale football game last Fall. It was then I decided to divorce Conky.

"We don't know just when we'll be married, but it'll probably be soon."

"Conky wanted to shed all his time abroad, while I wanted to be in America. I asked no alimony—all he had to pay was my lawyers' bills."

Mrs. Whitehead and her fiance are stopping at the Hotel Pierre. The Whiteheads were married in November, 1929. A year later, she charged, the Atlanta, Ga., playboy deserted her in a Chicago hotel. Pierce is 25, three years older than his prospective bride and is in business with his father.

AFRICAN FLY IN SLEEP DEATHS

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 28 (INS)—Three more deaths from "sleeping sickness" raised the total for the epidemic today to 39 as health experts investigated the possibility that the African tse-tse fly is spreading the disease.

Thirteen new cases brought the number reported in this section to 266.

William Godin, a former resident of Borneo, told authorities he had seen an insect similar to the tse-tse fly in his yard he[illegible] The fly is regarded as the sleeping sickness carrier in Africa.

'Oust Liquor Board and Let Saloons in,' Solons Told

Abolition of the state liquor control commission and a return to local option when hard liquors come back were advocated today at The State House in the first hearing before the special legislative committee created to study the situation and recommend legislation.

By some speakers even the return of the open saloon of the old days was recommended, they asserting that the open saloon is the practical operation now in beer selling.

Before launching the hearing, Senator Harry B. Putnam of Westfield, chairman, defended the committee's proposed trip to Canada to study liquor laws.

This projected tour, which has been criticized as a "junket" is a necessity, he declared because conditions cannot be learned second hand from books and statements, but must be studied on the spot. The 17 members of the committee, he said, will spend six days on the trip and it is estimated the expenses will total approximately $1300.

FAVORS HOME RULE

Frank A. Coleman, president of the Massachusetts Association of Wholesalers and Distributors of Alcoholic Beverages, was the first speaker at the hearing and said he favored return to home rule in the matter of liquor laws.

Asked by Chairman Putnam if he meant the state liquor control commission should be abolished, Coleman replied that he thought so, because the old laws in Massachusetts worked well and were held up as examples all over the country.

"Do you favor return of the saloon?" he was asked by Putnam.

"I think so," he replied. "The word itself is a misnomer. There are bars now selling beer."

FOR SALOON'S RETURN

Hugh J. McMackin, secretary of the same organization, said he would file a draft of laws on the subject which would be practically the old licensing system.

Joseph F. Sullivan, representing the Massachusetts Wine and Spirits Dealers' Association, favored the open saloon, while James F. Quinn, former Boston liquor dealer, favored the old system of selling under supervision of state commission.

David F. Sibley, acting counsel for the Constitutional Liberty League, said he and his organization favor as little prohibition as possible in the new liquor laws because restrictions will mean bootlegging.

M'GURN FACES KIDNAP GRILL

Chicago, Aug. 28 (AP)—The Federal government prepared to take a hand today in Chicago's war on criminals and question Jack McGurn, high on the police list as a "public enemy," about the kidnaping of John Factor.

At the same time Chief of Detectives Schoemaker said 25 other persons on the list would be turned over to Melvin H. Purvis, chief of the local Federal Department of Justice, when they are arrested.

Warrants for them have been issued by Municipal Judge Green under the new criminal reputation law, and more than 200 more would be asked for known hoodlums, Schoemaker said.

McGurn was arrested Saturday far from the haunts for which his name has been associated as a gangster, as he was picked up while competing in the Western Open Golf tournament at the Olympia Fields Country Club.

ELLIOTT ROOSEVELT SAYS U. S. NEEDS BIG AIR FLEET

Criticizes Smug Optimism as Other Great Powers Build and We Lag Behind in Our Defenses

By ELLIOTT ROOSEVELT
Aviation Editor, Boston Evening American
Copyright, 1933, the Boston Evening American.

I hope that those who read what I have to say regarding aviation as an industry and as a national economic and social necessity will not be those who are today taking part in its advancement or who are today (taking advantage and accepting its undoubted service. I aim to reach the average man and woman who have a vague idea that the industry is growing in importance in their own community, but do not know how it actually affects their lives.

Elliott Roosevelt

This country has one man to thank for an object lesson. I refer to that great Italian flier, Balbo.

Twenty-four ships flew with ease from Italy to Chicago and returned. Those 24 ships were fighting craft—instruments of war, capable of annihilating the whole populations of cities the size of New York, Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

The United States is no more an isolated nation. Our boundaries, with two vast bodies of water to the east and west, and two friendly nations to the north and south, have made us practically impregnable from a military viewpoint in the past.

Today all that is changed. When 24 ships can fly with ease from Rome to Chicago, 2400 can likewise accomplish the task. Modern warfare, is a fearsome thing to contemplate, but we must contemplate its results and guard against the possibility of its recurrence.

Is this nation prepared to meet attack and launch a counter-attack in case of war? "No," is the sad but unmistakable answer.

This country has been a pioneering nation since its birth. We point with pride to the first two men who ever flew, Wilbur and Orville Wright. We point with equal pride to such great aviators as Lindbergh, Byrd, Amelia Earhart and scores of others.

We remember how our navy gloriously made aviation history by the flight of the NC-4. And the early world's record speeds attained by Lieut. Al Williams and others in the Pulitzer trophy race and the Schneider cup races. But, it's a long time since all those records were made.

Yes, we held the world's speed record when it was around the 285 an hour mark, but England and Italy have long ago boosted that mark to around 460 miles an hour.

BEATS PURSUIT PLANE

Today, it is pretty hard to find a single record which this country holds.

Why is this?

Well, let's get around to facing the facts. Our army and navy air equipment is so far behind the rest of the world that today we rank fourth among the other nations of the world in the matter of numbers of airplanes in active military service.

England, France and Italy far surpass us in military strength in the air.

Nobody in this country seems to realize that Japan and Soviet Russia are concentrating on increasing their strength in the air so that shortly they, too, will surpass us. As far as sheer numbers we seem to be outclassed. How does our equipment stand up by comparison?

I believe our navy could not at the present time duplicate the Italian seaplanes' feat. Navy officials may challenge my statement. The average equipment used by the army air corps, from my observation, is not what might be expected of a powerful nation such as ours. I have actually been in a commercial transport plane that flew circles around a regular army pursuit ship! That took place only last spring.

How about personnel?

We have a fine group of men in the service in both branches. BUT they are helpless and would be outclassed against the aviators of the other leading nations in battle. Why? They have not the equipment to fight on equal terms with other nations. Their training is limited and their numbers restricted, due to a tightening policy of economy which does not tighten wisely.

I do not criticize economy. We have had need for just that in our government for years. But today we are striving to keep our defenses impregnable. For that reason we are spending millions on a navy program. I do not blame our government for wanting to increase that arm of our defenses.

In 1917, when Germany had destroyed 155 British ships, we had over 100 cruisers and 280 destroyers. Today we have only 10 of the first type and 180 of the second type.

The government has awarded contracts for 37 new ships. These ships will cost $238,000,000. Fine, but all 37 of those ships would be helpless against a similar number of Japanese ships supplemented by their modern airplanes.

Our air equipment would be woefully weak in attempting to cooperate with this new navy against any attack by a major power.

Our navy sea forces are helpless without adequate co-operation from the air. Our army, which is vital in backing up our naval defense, would be crippled without an unexcelled air corps.

We are a grand nation, but we're open to criticism when viewed in our smug attitude that our homes and wives and children live in security.

The Pacific coast with its great pride in advancement and achievement is asleep. The most powerful industry, on earth, in years to come, has made California its cradle. Vast fortunes were founded and built in railroading from its birth through long years of growth. Railroads became the backbone of our land. Aviation and air transportation stand where railroads stood fifty or more years ago.

The same vast fortunes will be built by the same type of pioneering men in this still new infant industry during the next fifty years. The government of the United States heavily subsidized the railroads during their infancy. It even went so far as to donate every other section of land clear across the continent to such companies as had the courage to attempt advancement.

Those same railroads enriched their government and made possible prosperity for a young nation such as few dreamed was possible.

The government then had foresight. It had courage and a pioneering spirit whether the country at that time happened to be in the throes of depression or not. It must maintain that same spirit or we, as a nation, must lose our position as the ranking country of the world.

NEED STRONG DEFENSE

We need adequate defense, especially when all the rest of the world is arming to the teeth. We must have a navy that is unsurpassed. We must have a modern army. But above all we must supplement this with an air corps second to none. Without that we might as well toss our battleships, cruisers, destroyers and submarines over Niagara Falls and line our army up one by one before a firing squad.

If Americans as a whole have any pride in their homes and the safety of their families they will take the trouble to acquaint themselves with the facts about aviation.

They will take the interest to find out what a tremendous effect the development of commercial aviation will have on their economic life and how greatly a part these great transportation lines play in equipping us with adequate national defense.

They will find out what their government is doing to aid in the advancing of this all-important industry.

They will see what the rest of the world is doing and when they see that the government is falling down on the job, they will bring pressure to bear through their representatives in Congress.

(Mr. Roosevelt in this and subsequent articles which will appear under his name, is writing as a private individual, and is not in any way to be regarded as having any connection with officialdom in Washington.—Editor's note.)

Close to Death in Fight With Shark

Hermosa Beach, Cal., Aug. 28.—Nathaniel C. Myrick, young executive of a telephone company, landed a 15-foot 450 pound shark aongside his boat. The shark thrashed wildly, and slashed Myrick's arm from shoulder to wrist, severing an artery. A forunate quet saved Myrick's life. After a two-hour battle the shark was killed.

Byrd's Ship in Boston for Overhaul

The imminence of Rear Admiral Byrd's approaching dash to the South Pole was brought forcibly to mind today as work started at the Navy Yard on the reconditioning of his supply ship, Pacific Fir.

The vessel, which has been in the service of the U. S. Shipping Board, came round from New York and was tied up near the Bear of Oakland, flagship of the expedition, which has been there since early summer.

Alterations are to be made below decks on the Pacific Fir, and she will be thoroughly conditioned for the long voyage to the Bay of Whales in the Antartic, which is expected to start late in September or early in October.

The Pacific Fir, with a speed of more than 10 knots, is the fastest ship Byrd has had in his expeditions to the far South, and is expected to make two trips to the Bay of Whales during the brief season when the ice pack is open between middle of December and late in February.

Lack of speed was a handicap to the first expedition, the flagship New York proving even slower than expected. The present flagship, the Bear of Oakland, is speedier than the New York.

The Pacific Fir will carry at least one of the airplanes Byrd will take with him.

Soldier Faces Court for Selling Secrets

Colon, C. Z., Aug. 28—Corporal Ralph Osman of the United States Army will go on trial today on a charge of possessing confidential military documents. He is from Brooklyn, N. Y. Previously it was said that the documents never had left the possession of the corporal but army officials have revealed that they had been mailed to New York, where they were recovered by postal authorities.

New York Music Critic Dies in Paris

New York, Aug. 28 (US)—Word was received here of the death in Paris on Saturday of Irving Weil, music critic of the Evening Journal since 1910. His health had been failing for the last few years.

Mr. Weil had gone abroad late in the spring with his cousin, Mrs. William Shiber of this city, who was with him at the time of his death. Her husband is wire chief of the New York American and the Evening Journal, and it was with them that Mr. Weil, who was unmarried, made his home.

U. S. Party Ejected at French Customs

Cannes, France, Aug. 28—A number of Americans, including a party in evening dress, who had come from night clubs to meet friends, were ejected from the Customs House here upon the arrival of the Italian liner Rex. An official who ejected the Americans cited "special orders."

The group included friends of Harold S. Vanderbilt of New York and his recent bride and also the American vice consul.

B. C. Sends Lawyers to U. S. Bar Conclave

Boston College Law School will be represented by three faculty members at the annual American Bar Association meeting which opens tomorrow at Grand Rapids, Mich.

They are, Dean Dennis A. Dooley, member of the section of legal education; Francis J. Carney, member of general counsel and committee on ethics and grievances; and Richard J. Dunn who is assisting in the organization of the new section on insurance law.

Crickets Open War on Grasshopper Eggs

Saskatoon, Sask., Aug. 28 (US)—The field cricket, common in Saskatchewan, has reached the adult stage and is now destroying eggs of the grasshoppers by the millions, it is reported. Though a relative of the grasshopper and the locust, the cricket does little damage to crops or garden vegetables, but it does, according to entomologists, destroy all the hopper eggs that it can find.

Hawks Sets Record on New Haven Flight

New Haven, Conn., Aug. 28—Frank Hawks, American speed ace, completed a non-stop flight from Quebec in 2 hours, 19 minutes, landing at the New Haven Municipal Airport.

Hawks, who had completed a flight from Vancouver to Quebec Tuesday, brought a letter from Lt. Col. C. S. Lavigueur, mayor of Quebec, to Mayor John W. Murphy, of New Haven.

Flood Tosses House Mile, Puts 'For Sale' Sign on It

Brooklyn, Md., Aug. 28 (AP)—Is H. C. Bourke, Jr., going to buy the house standing on his lot at Kelly's Point, on Gray's Creek, or is William Krahling going to buy the site on which his house is standing?

That was the situation today.

Krahling was undecided about purchasing the lot but Bourke has offered to buy the house.

Krahling, a ship's carpenter at the coast guard depot at Curtis Bay, last year built himself a house on the Magothy river. It was a good house, constructed watertight in the manner of a house boat.

Then came the winds and rain of last Wednesday and the floods forced the Krahling family to go to a neighbor's for the night.

When Krahling returned home the next morning, there was no house. It was across the river on Bourke's lot, a mile away, carried there by the floods.

The house on its new site was ready for occupancy. It had weathered its journey so well that the fruit was still in a bowl on a table and the coffee pot was still on the stove.

This Is Life

—By ROBERT E. ROGERS—

And the rains fell
And the wind blew
And beat upon that house
And it fell—
Because it was built upon the sand.

From the Chesapeake to Buzzards Bay thousands of folk learned last week how applicable the old poetic parable still is.

Communications down and villages flooded in Maryland; great boardwalks and piers ripped away at New Jersey pleasure resorts; the crops destroyed in the market gardens around Camden; a train wrecked on an undermined bridge near Washington; the three great set cities of the East rain-swept and wind-swept with much damage; the Barnegat lighthouse in danger as the waves scour away the sands, cottages toppled upside down by swirling billows; a liner in danger; little boats swamped; loss of life and property all along the coast.

And yet the summer people wonder why in our seaside villages the houses of the old-timers nestle far away from the coast in little hollows or in the lee of sand dunes, or perched on the low hills where the winds may whistle but the waters will never come.

The summer people wonder why the little houses stand back on the road, turned away from the sea, their porches and best room windows overlooking only other little houses and the monotonous traffic of the highway, when they might be overlooking the ever-changing and yet changeless spectacle of the sea.

And the natives wonder why these fool summer boarders want to get their frail shacks down as close to the sea as possible and turn their backs on the respectability and society of the street. They even feel affronted a little that the back-porch and the kitchen and the ice-box of the summer folk should be where the parlor ought to be.

It doesn't matter much for the summer people—usually. One or two heavy blows and salt storms during the summer may tear the garden about and leave it black and unattractive. But there will be another summer and another garden. Once in a great while the waves will suck at the piazza posts and they will be a bit anxious. But in the main the summer people have nothing to worry about. They never see their house as it looks in the January north-easter or when the tail of a tropical hurricane leaves its way up the coast. It is well they do not, or they might be worried. The natives know!

The older generation played safe. The newer creeps every year closer and closer to the sea, firm in the faith that modern civilization—or something—is diminishing the power of wind and tide to destroy. Year after year the Atlantic batters at the houses at Beachmont and on the parade at Winthrop. Annually one sees in the picture houses the news-reels of the damage done by storms to those who insist on building and living as close to the coast as they can get. Yet one never hears of an especially exposed point being deserted by folks who have had their belly-full of being flooded and washed about and undermined year after year.

One is reminded of the Italian folk who continue to build their houses and cultivate their vineyards on the slopes of Mount Etna or Mount Vesuvius in the face of a record of over two thousand years of sporadic and terrible destruction. Well-known earthquake centers—Tokio, Messina and Los Angeles—seem to be more thickly populated, if anything, than places where earthquakes are but never been heard of. Man learns slowly and with difficulty and through tribulation. Man forgets easily and blithely. Something once so strong, no longer really affects us. The things which awed our fathers bother us not at all. We tend to live undismayedly in the present.

Nature has a little way of reminding us that, although civilization—by definition—is the conquest and correction of nature, nature still retains the whip hand in the fundamentals. But we could be more ingenious in our attempts, not to control nature but to minimize its terrors. There is probably nothing we can do to avert temperature of one hundred degrees. But we can live more intelligently when it is hot, than we do live.

No human power can avert or stop an earthquake but we can build more intelligently and more honestly than we do. The Japanese paper house is safe. The scientifically constructed sky-scraper is safe. The jerry-built city street collapses. We cannot ward off the ocean when wind and tide combine to threaten us, but we need not build down to the edge of the sands. As for lighthouses, railroad bridges, piers and the like, we can probably build better than we do—build against that extra, unexpected, once-in-a-lifetime stress, which may never come. But if it does come, human life is the price of our fancied security.

At least, our houses can be founded upon the rock.

MAJ. CAVANAUGH FIGHTS ON LAST ONE-YARD LINE

"Little hope" remains for the "Iron Major," according to the bulletin issued at noon today from the bedside of Maj. Frank W. Cavanaugh, nationally famous football coach at Dartmouth, Boston College, Holy Cross and Fordham University.

Last sacraments of the Catholic Church were administered yesterday at his home in Marshfield where his personal physician, Dr. Donald Tegge, has for days been maintaining the spark of life with stimulants.

David Cavanaugh of New York, the major's son, won his race with death as he reached his father's bedside this morning.

The "Iron Major," World War veteran and builder of some of the most successful football teams of recent years, was discharged from the Cohasset Hospital Aug. 3 after an operation for strangulated hernia. At that time his health was reported to be much improved.

He suffered a relapse a short time later, however, and since every treatment known to science has been used in his behalf.

3 CAPTURED IN HOLDUP CHASE

Three youthful gunmen were captured in Winchester today within four minutes of having held up a grocery proprietor at the Stoneham-Melrose line three miles away.

The trio took $3.45, 10 cartons of cigarettes and candy, after locking Manager Philip Bacon in the cellar of the store at Franklin and Ferdinand sts.

Bacon crawled through a window as the bandit machine roared away, commandeered the auto of Henry J. Scanlon, which was passing, and gave chase to Stoneham sq. He managed to get close enough to take the registration of the robbers' machine.

Police of Winchester, Arlington, Woburn and Medford were notified.

Sergt. Thomas Cassidy and Patrolman John Murray left the Winchester station in a cruise car within a few seconds of receiving the call and within a minute were on into the gunmen's car at Washington and Main sts. Sergt. Cassidy, gun out, leaped in the car at the other machine, which stopped.

Those arrested are Vincent E. Murtha, 20, of Pearl st, Chelsea; Gerald F. Richard, 19, Walnut st., Everett, and Gordon A. Vars, 16, Garland st., Chelsea.

large sums he said were given him by the widow.

Capt. John J. Kearney of the Cambridge police notified Chief Chevyler today that he had one man stationed at Mrs. Croucher's home and three detectives searching the city for her.

Three men of similar descriptions later appeared at the widow's Stratham hotel, it was learned, and left a key which they said a "couple" would call for. Mrs. Croucher was not with them.

"She gives me all the money I want," the widow said. "Sometimes she gives me $450 a week. She has bought me five different autos and she has given me money. My married life hasn't been happy, but I'm all right now and I'll soon be able to take care of all my relatives."

Police said they traced Teixrian writing on a piece of paper in his cell.

"I didn't do it, but it was an awful deed."

They said that at the time of his arrest, before anything had been said to him, he told them:

"I didn't have anything to do with it. We take a look at my car. You won't find any blood on it."

Subsequent investigation revealed the car had been thoroughly cleaned of all blood stains. After Mr. Palmer's disappearance on July 13, and that later attempts were made to sell it.

Morgenthau Sees War in Europe

Bar Harbor, Me., Aug. 28—Europe, and probably the entire world, faces another war unless definite steps are taken to prevent it, in the opinion of Henry Morgenthau, Jr., of the American delegates to the economic conference in London.

In an address here Morgenthau said he could see war clouds forming at three or four points in Europe and he looked with dismay upon the day the forces might clash.

Hibernians Meet at Springfield

Springfield, Aug. 28—Nearly 700 delegates and their wives and friends attended 9 o'clock mass at St. Michael's Cathedral today for the opening of the annual state convention of the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

At the convention opening later in the auditorium, Mayor Daniel E. Winter welcomed the visitors. The annual banquet of the organization is scheduled for tonight, to make a radio report to the

Ten Smartest Dressed Stars of Screen Named by Adrian

Joan Crawford's selection by Adrian, head of the list of stars who wear the most striking clothes in Hollywood, is no surprise to feminine movie fans. They've known all along Joan's clothes were just what Adrian said they were—"ultra."

"Kay Francis wears her clothes well," said Adrian, M.G.M designer. "Miss Francis' chick and personality are aids in setting off the attractive styles she chooses." Now Hollywood can learn about clothes from these two stars.

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Hollywood, Aug. 28—Who are the ten most strikingly dressed women on the screen? We started a controversy on the 10 smartest dressed women in the world that lasted for days. Arguments, some bitter, some amusing and some serious, came from all four corners of the globe.

Adrian, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's famous designer, now names the ten women who, in his opinion, wear the most striking clothes on the screen. Not the best dressed women but those whose costumes are the most chic and the most likely to set the styles of the future.

Here is Adrian's list:

Joan Crawford	Constance Bennett
Katharine Hepburn	Hedda Hopper
Norma Shearer	Marlene Dietrich
Kay Francis	Claudette Colbert
Lilyan Tashman	Greta Garbo

"These women," says Adrian, "do more to mould the styles of the world than any other ten women. Greta Garbo's styles, however, are too individual to be widely copied.

"You feel the Garbo influence," he says, "but it's usually a modified style when it is adopted by other women. So few women can wear clothes that are so personal and so typically Garbo.

"Marion Davies' style is too youthful to be really becoming to the average woman. She, more than any other actress, can wear the simple, little-girl frocks. He's a joy to design clothes for her," Adrian said, "because she wears these jeune fille costumes so well. No Davies' frock is ever bizarre and extreme, but for simplicity and charm Miss Davies' clothes are in a class by themselves.

"Ina Claire, were she classified as a screen actress, would be entitled to be listed among the ten most strikingly dressed women on the screen. In the few pictures she has made, her costumes have attracted attention and become the vogue," Adrian said,

"Joan Crawford's clothes are ultra, but not too extreme for most modern girls. Kay Francis wears clothes especially well. Her chic and her own personality are a great aid in setting off styles."

Adrian also compliments Dolores del Rio, whose creations are always original, and always smart, but only suitable to her dark, exotic beauty.

I hope we have started something, and that the men, as well as the women, will give us an argument for or against Adrian's most strikingly dressed women.

Huge Water Supply "Lost in Transit"

Sharon, Pa., Aug. 28 (INS)—"Water, water everywhere, but not a drop in the Shenango river."

Ralph J. Ferris, resident engineer of the Pymatuning dam and the "ancient mariner" of the Shenango, has launched an investigation to find out what has happened to 20,000,000 gallons of water.

The water, a good-sized bucketful in any man's language, was released from the dam last Friday but none of it has reached here. In fact, the level of the Shenango has fallen.

Pymatuning dam was built to deepen streams in the Western Pennsylvania industrial district through the summer months as an aid to steel mills and other plants.

Norman, Roosevelt Talk Arouses London

London, Aug. 28 (AP)—The meeting of President Roosevelt and Montagu Norman, Bank of England governor, aroused interest today in London financial quarters, and newspapers gave considerable space to United States reports about it.

Financial writers suggest it may have some connection with the decline of the dollar and the pound. This suggested to some the possibility of a race for depreciation between these two currencies, with the eventuality that the remaining gold countries might be forced off the gold standard.

Cash Wanted by Only Half of Depositors

Washington, Ind., Aug. 28 (AP)—Officers of the Farmers Bank of Montgomery announced they wished to close it and requested depositors to come and get their money, but only about half of the $52,000 on deposit has been paid out. The others won't come and get it.

100 Sisters Attend Teachers' Institute

The annual Teachers' Institute opens today at Boston College high school with nearly 100 nuns, members of eight different orders, in attendance. The institute, inaugurated by Cardinal O'Connell, will continue to September 1.

PLANES CARRY BOSTON'S NRA PLEDGE

them on to the task of gathering Blue Eagle pledges.

It is expected that more than 2500 volunteer workers will take part in the drive.

Their duties were explained to them by Col. Howard Emerson while Victor M. Cutter, chairman of the board, and Eliot Wadsworth, of the Chamber of Commerce, also made brief speeches.

BRAVES AID DRIVE

A little later in the afternoon, the pennant-chasing Braves let out a whoop for the "thunder bird." Edward A. Filene, acting for the state recovery board, hurled the first ball in today's game with the Cincinnati Reds, while Judge Emil Fuchs announced that he was donating 25 per cent of the day's receipts for the upkeep of the board's office in Federal st.

Perhaps the biggest feature of the [illegible] will come [illegible] when Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, chairman of the NRA in Washington, will speak by radio from the government wide Gen. John H. Sherburne, chairman of enrollment, is also scheduled to talk.

Milkmen's Horses and Blue Eagle

Maybe a milk man's horse and the thunder bird of the NRA have little in common, but this morning old Dobbin was the Blue Eagle's best ally.

In all parts of Greater Boston, milk men distributed NRA consumer pledge cards with a request that they be signed and left for them to pick up tomorrow.

President over Station WRZ. This program will go on the air at 9:30 p. m.

The report on the progress of the NRA in Massachusetts will be read by Edward A. Filene. Gov. Ely, speaking from Springfield, will urge the necessity of citizens joining in the movement. Miss Mary Ward will point to woman's part in the movement while [illegible] will depart immediately afterward.

Musical features will be the President's favorite song, "Anchors Aweigh," and, of course, "The Star-Spangled Banner."

"THERE SHE STANDS"

The text of the message sent to the summer White House by plane follows:

"Sir: Well-organized consumers' campaign starts today in all three hundred and twenty-five cities and towns in this state. Large majority of firms and industries have already adopted NRA code. In the historical words of Daniel Webster, 'Massachusetts, there she stands!'"

The message was signed by the Massachusetts State Recovery Board.

The campaign will reach its peak here Wednesday with the arrival of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, national recovery administrator. He is to speak at a rally of NRA workers. Plans for an elaborate reception were dropped when it was learned that he would fly here in time to make his luncheon appearance and would depart immediately afterward.

JUDGE LOWELL IN NRA PLEA

Advocating co-operation in pushing to a successful conclusion the National Industrial Recovery Act, Judge James A. Lowell praised President Roosevelt at the naturalization session in federal court today and predicted better times shortly.

"I am naturally an optimist and believe we have passed through the crucial period of the depression and are now reaching better times," said Judge Lowell.

"The National Industrial Recovery Act is not only for the good of the country, your neighbor's good, but for your own good as well. Give it a good trial.

It is something that has never been tried here before.

"Co-operation is essential to pushing there every plans. You can do your part. We've got to try out these plans. Better times are ahead of us. Talk up the Recovery act."

Italy Lowers Interest

Rome, Aug. 28—A government decree has lowered the maximum interest from 5½ to 5 per cent on annuities issued to pay for public works during the last five years.

Wasps Routed by Vacuum Cleaner

Seattle, Aug. 28 (AP)—A bonfire failed to smoke an unwelcome nest of wasps from under the front porch at the home of Mrs. W. B. Snow of Zenith.

So she used the vacuum cleaner. It worked to perfection, she said.

POISON DEATH CLUE TESTED

Lawrence, Aug. 28—Police today awaited a report from Dr. William F. Boos, Harvard toxicologist, to decide charges against one or more of three persons in connection with the death last Tuesday of Miss Laura Mailloux, 18-year-old saleslgirl.

Miss Mailloux was first reported a victim of illegal surgery but the investigation turned to a theory that she might have died from pills that contained poison. The vital organs were then given Dr. Boos for chemical tests.

Frank J. Chamberlain, 34, to whom Miss Mailloux was to have been wed on Labor Day, is at the county jail to await the outcome of the examination. Another man and a woman also are under arrest.

PRISCILLA PRICE SHOPS FOR THE HOLIDAY!

Dearest Anne:

Don't forget we have a grand holiday week-end to plan for this week. The lovely new fall styles and the displays in all the shop windows are enough to make any woman want to spend, and spend and spend on bright new things for herself—and her home. There's nothing so good for the soul as the knowledge that you look your very best. Really, you'd be surprised what a new permanent—a new hat, or frock, will do to tone up your morale. I found the Boston shops full of new and exciting things this week—at prices within the most limited of budgets. So let's be off on your shopping tour—first of all—

New Fall Dresses Sale—$2.88!

Take your Priscilla's advice and see these dresses before you buy for the Holiday! They are all new Fall dresses in lovely new colors and fabrics. The New York Dress Mfg. Co. dares anyone to duplicate any of these dresses in any retail store for less and double dares any store in Boston to duplicate them for less! If you can duplicate the dress you buy there in any other retail store at their prices they will refund the money and you keep the dress free! There are other smart models at $3.75 and $4.49, and as high as $14.95. The only store of the New York Dress Mfg. Co. is on the 2nd floor at 515 Washington St., Boston. The largest upstairs dress shop in Boston.

Why Be Embarrassed?

by a horrid growth of superfluous hair when it can be permanently and painlessly removed by Electrolysis? The Mollé Rapport, skilled electrolysis Needle Specialist, with 16 years' experience, is highly recommended by physicians. She has Bubble pointed needles, and multiple Electric Needle machines, to remove superfluous hair. Miss Rapport also teaches Beauty Culture. Miss Mollé Rapport is at 125 Tremont St., Room 310. Han. 7286.

Last Call To Save!

Lepie's is still stocked at old prices—everything is marked at prices that will not be possible again after September 1st. But here's some news you'll appreciate—you may order now for the Fall and take advantage of the present low prices. The lovely, gay gingham Dutch Cottage set sketched is now only 87c. The overdrapes are gingham patterned and the sash curtain of figured Marquisette, gingham trimmed. See Lepie's other curtain values. Lepie's, 36 Chauncy St. Lib. 3869 Mail Orders 15c extra.

Now—Filene's Has Created a Chiffon Stocking that "WEARS!"

You're going to be as delighted as I was when I discovered these "improved" Filette chiffons in Filene's Stocking Shop! They are made with a heel within a heel—double in other words—and double in service. The heel barely shows above the top of your shoe—very smart as well as durable. The toes are made double with no seam except in bottom of foot. You'll have fewer runs because a graduated triple weft better distributes the strain on the leg of stockings. So you see, all points of wear are protected—and wait—here's another happy surprise—Filette chiffons are only $1 a pair! Of course they are in the very newest fall shades. Ask to see "Flattery"—Filene's new 10 percenter shade for fall. It "goes with" everything. "Harmony" is another lovely shade—especially good to wear with the new rusts, greens and browns. If you are one of those people who like shopping to match perfect, I'm sure you'll find Filene's Stocking Shop is on the street floor. P. S. These Filene stockings are so good that makers all over the country are copying them!

New Taffeta and Satin Hats, $1

The hat sketched is the BOSTON WHOLESALE MILLINERY'S answer to the cry for a perfect hat to complete your holiday costume. It's the kind of hat that causes your spirits to soar the minute you put it on! Comes in taffeta or satin—and priced at only $1! You may have it in black, brown or blue. Headsizes 22 to 23. The BOSTON WHOLESALE MILLINERY is on the 3rd floor of the Blake Bldg., 59 Temple Place, at Washington.

Painful Feet

Leg, Knee and Back Pains

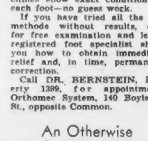
There is a new process of restoring sore, painful, bused feet to normal. Patented machines show exact condition of each foot—no guess work.

If you have tried all the old methods without results, call for free examination and let a registered foot specialist show you how to obtain immediate relief and, in time, permanent correction.

Call DR. BERNSTEIN, Liberty 1399, for appointment. Orthopaedic System, 150 Boylston St., opposite Common.

An Otherwise Perfect Complexion

can be ruined by a horrid growth of superfluous hair! Miss Roche, well known Electric needle specialist, uses an ultra modern multiple needle machine which removes superfluous hair painlessly, permanently, and safely! The multiple needle treatment costs no more than the single treatment, in fact it saves you both time and money! Physicians' references. No consultation fee. Miss Roche, 236 Boylston Street, Suite 404, Ken. 3418.



L. Max, Jr. Reduces Prices!

Have an individual Permanent this Fall and save money! L. Max, Jr., gifted son of a famous father, will continue giving his individual wave at reduced prices for a short time only. What a lovely wave he creates! Deep, shining ripples and a moment in the intriguing little flat right ends. It's perfect even if hair is grey, bleached, dyed or permanently. Expert hair tinting is done in daylight booths. Consultation free of charge. Remember moderate L. Max, Jr., Inc., 3rd floor, 145 Tremont St. Tel. Dev. 7069.

Fall Brides

You can cut your wedding stationery expense just about 50 to 85 per cent by having it done in the New Relief Process which society acknowledges to be very fine. This Process makes it possible to produce correct Wedding Stationery with all lettering in Relief without the use of engraved plates. Special—Wedding Invitations or Announcements, $7.35 per hundred. Other designs, $3 to $18 a hundred. For free samples, visit, write or telephone the Relief Printing Corp., 87 Summer St., Boston, Tel. Liberty 9256.

Never Before Has The opportunity for thrifty shopping been greater than it is today! The shops are full of new Fall merchandise, with inviting price tags, and your dollar goes three times as far as it ever did. Anne, now that we know that prices are bound to go up very soon, we certainly must plan to buy the many things we will need this Fall right now when prices are still low. I've never been so excited about the fashions as I am this Fall—Everything is so new—so flattering! Now, my fond hope is that some of the addresses I've told you about will look nice tucked in your mirror for future reference.

Devotedly,

Priscilla Price

O'DUFFY BLUE SHIRTS FEARED BY DE VALERA

By ARNO DOSCH-FLEUROT, International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Copyright, 1933, International News Service

Cork, Irish Free State, Aug. 28 (INS)—In an atmosphere of gravest tension, Ireland's latest revolutionary movement took form today, led by Gen. Owen O'Duffy.

Self-appointed chieftain of 30,000 or more "blue shirts" seeking to oust De Valera, O'Duffy bears little personal resemblance to Mussolini or to Hitler.

But his powers are absolute and his threat to the DeValera regime genuine. De Valera fears dangerous clashes, if nothing else.

The key to the O'Duffy movement is in the sky-blue shirts his "army" wears.

O'Duffy rejected green, traditionally Irish, on the ground that, contrary to song and story, it is not the historic color of the Emerald Isle.

The "wearin' of the green," O'Duffy says, dates back only 200 or 300 years, while the blue of the sky was Ireland's crest and color in the glorious days of her own kings.

Close-fitting black trousers, pulled in at waist with sash and silver buckle, a black tie and a dark blue or black beret completes the costume.

O'Duffy wore his for the first time yesterday, when, defying De Valera, he held a prohibited demonstration and placed a wreath at a commemorative cross beside a wild mountain torrent where his old commander, Michael Collins, was ambushed and killed in August, 1922.

O'Duffy, 43, a typically amiable Irishman, organized his "national guard" less than a month ago and already has taken his place with Mussolini and Hitler as recipient of a fascist salute.

Tinkham Put in 'A Tough Spot'

George Holden Tinkham will no doubt pull his whiskers as he finds victory only hollow in his crusade against Statuary Hall in the Capitol, which he calls "the Hall of Horrors."

Score another triumph for Rep. George Holden Tinkham of Boston, perennial bewhiskered Congressman.

George always complained that those two statues in Statuary Hall at the Capitol at Washington "got in his hair." Or rather in his whiskers.

"The Chamber of Horror," he called the place, and now half the statues there are to be removed, which will be great news for George, who is now abroad.

Somehow or other George always seems to be traveling when he wins his greatest victories, engendering the suspicion he gets away to make it easier for his opponents to give in to him.

The excuse given for removing half of the 65 statues is that the foundations will not support them all.

This is the former hall of the House of Representatives, in the wing burned by the British in 1812, and when rebuilt it was not placed squarely on the old foundations, due to architectural changes in the hall itself.

Each state was formerly supposed to furnish two greats or near-greats for the hall, and Massachusetts has John Winthrop, first governor, and Samuel Adams, sparkplug of the revolution there. One of the two must go. Each state can have only one.

Wonder who George will favor.

The congressman must decide which of two Massachusetts greats may keep his pedestal—John Winthrop, first governor, whose statue is third from the left, or Sam Adams, sparkplug of the Revolution. One must go.

Four Killed in Blast

Whatcheer, Iowa., Aug. 28—Four firemen were killed in an explosion in a two-story brick grocery store and meat market which caught fire here.

Killed in Motorcycle Wreck

TWO BURNED IN BRIGHTON

Two men were seriously burned today as the result of a gasoline explosion in the plant of the Brighton Dressed Meat Co., 4 Abattoir Grounds, Brighton.

They are Richard Davis, 40, of 160 Menlo st., Brighton, and William Damilas, 45, of 35 Lincoln st., Brighton, both of whom suffered second and third degree burns. They were taken to homes after treatment by a physician.

The blast and fire occurred as they were singeing hogs. A sprinkler system went into action at once, with the result that the blaze was extinguished before firemen reached the scene.

Thousands Use Coupons for Paragon Outing

Through the Boston Evening American and those interested in the Nantasket Steamboat Co., and Paragon Park directors, thousands of mothers with their youngsters went down the harbor today on another gala excursion and outing.

This was one of several that the Boston Evening American arranged and the crowd was the greatest this season. The happy and overjoyed youngsters had their chance to bellow forth with joy.

Mothers sat about the decks of the Nantasket steamboats getting the fresh air and sunshine and enjoyed happiness as they relaxed. It was just another picnic for the mothers and their children who will be back to school in a couple of weeks wrapped in study.

The first of the boats were packed with the cheering youths and the smiling parents who waited for these excursions. But, they will tell you that the ride down and back is only half the fun.

The big thrill comes at Paragon Park with the bargain coupons. There are the various rides, that no child likes to miss.

There are so many things to enjoy. In fact there are 12 big attractions and all for a coupon and 25 cents. There is the big matinee and evening show of Meehan's trained dogs, Hilarity Hall, Roller Coaster, Mill, Aeroplane, Caterpillar, The Hey Day, Scooter, Jig-Saw Thriller, Merry Go Round and Lind Loop.

Just think of it all those things to enjoy today for 25 cents and a coupon clipped from Saturday's Boston Evening American.

Then for the little bits of tots there was another coupon which got them into the Kiddie Park, inside Paragon, for 15 cents, where they enjoyed the various miniature amusements. Mothers had little worry with the tots because the attendents take them in full charge.

There will be no Coupon Day next Monday, but we will have very important announcement to make tomorrow in regard to Nantasket Beach and Paragon Park.

Engineers Start Highway Survey

A. W. Dean, chief engineer of the Massachusetts highway department, with representatives of seven other Atlantic seaboard states, will start today on a four-day survey in connection with the proposed super-highway between Boston and Washington, D. C.

ROOSEVELT IN MONEY PARLEY

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 28 (INS)—Finance, public works and patronage concerned President Roosevelt today in conferences with Montagu Norman of the Bank of England, George arrison, Governor of the New York Federal Reserve, Postmaster General Farley and Secretary of the Interior Ickes.

In connection with the Norman visit it was made plain this government has no intention of changing policy regarding stabilization of currencies.

Farley's visit was expected to bring some results on patronage.

Ickes brought the vast public works program the recovery organization is carrying out and new allotments of monies for work were expected as a result.

12 INJURED IN STRIKE RIOT

Hartford, Ct., Aug. 28 (AP)—Police were called today to quell the first disorder to develop since over 400 garment makers went on strike four days ago. Twelve workers, most of them girls, were bruised in a free-for-all melee before the shop of a pajama manufacturer.

Authorities said a preliminary investigation disclosed the trouble began as 125 employes attempted to enter the building for work, while several hundred girls, said to be strikers, were patrolling the sidewalks.

Meanwhile, a strike of 100 window washers began. What was the cause of this walkout has not been determined.

Many of the girls employed by the pajama company had their arms and legs scratched and bruised, and their clothing torn, police said.

Cambridge Youth Held as Burglar

Theodore H. Olsen, 22, of Walden st., Cambridge, faced Cambridge court today on charges of breaking and entering the home of C. R. Myers, Jr., of Hillside ave., Cambridge.

Olsen was captured in a kitchen closet, police said, after a neighbor of the Myers family notified police.

Brookline Chief Is Honored by Election

Aboard Steamer Seeanbee on Lake Huron, Aug. 28—The international association of fire chiefs, meeting in convention aboard a steamer on Lake Huron, elected Selden R. Allen, of Brookline, Mass., president.

Soldier of Fortune Offers Aid to Cuba

Camaguey, Cuba, Aug. 28—Col. Charles Muecke, American veteran of all Cuba's revolutions since 1895, has put himself at the head of 200 men calling themselves the "revolutionary civil guard" and offered his services to authorities.

Muecke who achieved his title in Cuba's war for independence from Spain took the field against Gerardo Machado several months ago despite his age of more than 60 years and the fact that he has only one eye.

N. Y. Fugitive Held in New London Jail

Colchester, Ct., Aug. 28—Samuel Schwartz, 45, of Moodus, charged with being a fugitive from justice from New York, was ordered held under $1800 bonds today by Justice of the Peace Joseph London. Schwartz was arrested by state police on charges of being a fugitive and operating an illegally registered automobile in Connecticut. He was remanded to jail at New London in default of bail.

Death Panel Renews Friendship at Picnic

Wellsboro, Pa., Aug. 28—Friendships formed by constant association as they sat in judgment at a murder trial were renewed today at a picnic. Jurors, who for six weeks heard testimony in the trial of Frank E. Davis, Jr., charged with slaying Henry O. Cooley, held a reunion at Woodland Park. Davis was acquitted.

Lindbergh Inspects Danish Navy Station

Copenhagen, Denmark, Aug. 28—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh visited the naval seaplane station here and examined his machine in which he and Mrs. Lindbergh arrived here, completing their route-finding survey trip across the North Atlantic.

14,000 V. F. W. Convene

Milwaukee, Aug. 28 (INS)—The 34th encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars was in full swing today with at least 14,000 delegates on hand. Maj. Gen. Smedley Butler and Senator Thomas of Oklahoma are scheduled to address the encampment.

4 QUINCY BEER DRUNKS JAILED

Four merry men of Quincy accepted $15 fines and sentences of three months each in the House of Correction today in Quincy court—following a 3.2 beer party in a stone shed in Liberty st., from which a half dozen others escaped.

The four are Edward Cashin, 55, of Holmes st.; John McIntosh, 39, of Quincy st.; Robert McDonnell, 50, of Bradford st., and William Douglas, 33, of Brooks road, all in Quincy.

They were charged with drunkenness, breaking and entering and larceny, the ingredients for the party having been stolen, it was alleged, from a Quincy warehouse—29 cases of beer and five cases of Canadian ale.

SATURDAY'S BRIDE AND BRIDEGROOM EXCHANGED their marriage vows in a cool green and white bower of Easter lilies, white gladioli and clematis in the lovely small church which is Trinity Church in Concord . . . tall lighted tapers in wrought iron candlesticks served to enhance the quietness and dignity of the occasion during the ceremony . . .

MRS. G. J. G. NICHOLSON, JR.

The bride, who was the popular Mary Cleveland of Concord, looked very lovely . . . the austere bridal satin was most becoming, which is not always the case; maidens seldom appear at their best when they are attired in the virginal robes and veils of marriage we have observed. She walked up the aisle on the arm of her father, Mr. Henry M. Cleveland, who gave her hand in marriage.

Carrying out the color scheme of cool green and white, the bridesmaids were charming in apple green crepe gowns with small, close fitting hats edged with tiny veils . . . they were Helena Thompson, maid of honor, Alice Newell, Dorothea Newman and Mrs. R. Devereaux Barker, Jr.

Mrs. Cleveland, the bride's mother, was very attractive in ashes of roses crepe trimmed with soft brown fur . . . she wore a small dark brown hat.

The bridegroom's mother, Mrs. George J. Guthrie Nicholson, was attired in the fashionable black and white of the mode . . .

Many of Bride's Schoolmates Attend

WE GLIMPSED MANY OF THE YOUNG BRIDE'S Concord Academy schoolmates in the huge throng which gathered at the County Club for the reception . . . the spacious living room of the club was an ideal setting for the receiving line which stood before a bank of evergreens with large green bowls of white flowers on either side . . . it was a perfect color effect for a mid-summer wedding . . . cool and inviting.

We must mention in this scheme the unusually lovely bridal cake which was in the center of the table set for the wedding party . . . instead of being a huge white mausoleum as is usually the bride's cake, exquisite pale sprays of angelica on snowy frosting made it tempting and beautiful . . .

It was a lovely wedding, simple but elegant . . . for a mid-summer wedding a gratifying number of friends came up from their summer homes for the event . . .

Bishop and Mrs. Philip Rhinelander attended from the Capital City . . .

Mrs. R. Devereaux Barker motored up from Marblehead in a soft lilac crepe gown which was extremely lovely on her . . .

From Chatham we glimpsed Mrs. Alfred Curtis, and the bride's aunt, Mrs. Louis Kingsley and Miss Kingsley . . .

Elizabeth Saunders in Red and White

A CLASSMATE, WHOSE ENGAGEMENT HAS recently been announced, attended from Salem, Miss Elizabeth Saunders . . . her red and white print dress was very attractive.

From Beverly Farms, the three Sortwell sisters were seen . . . Anne, who is a debutante of this season, wore a smart blue moire with matching hat and Elise was in a brown moire with same hat on the same lines . . . pretty blonde Frances Sortwell was in a dark red frock.

Another Concord Academy miss, Catherine Carter, was noted and pretty Mary Haskell drifted about among her many friends . . . Miss Haskell came out last season.

Mrs. George Proctor, mother of Mrs. B. Deveraux Barker, Jr., wore the cool blue and white of the day . . .

Mrs. George Haskell, Mary's mother, wore an aquamarine blue chiffon . . .

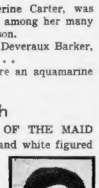
Honeymoon on Western Ranch

MRS. HENRY THOMPSON, MOTHER OF THE MAID of honor, Helena Thompson, was in a brown and white figured crepe . . .



Dorothea Newman

Mrs. James Newell, mother of Alice Newell, a bridesmaid, wore a pretty tan ensemble . . .

Others noted were Miss Mary Cleveland, an aunt of the bride's . . . Mr. and Mrs. Marion Eppley of Newport . . .

At noon the bridesmaids were entertained by Miss Dorothea Newman at luncheon at her home . . . the bride wore a sunback taupe satin and velvet dress with a close hat of the same materials . . . it was extremely smart.

After the wedding, the young couple flew to New York and will take an airplane from there to Wyoming in the West where they will spend three weeks on a ranch . . . returning to take up residence in New York.

Presentation at Ball Planned

MISS ALICE M. CARTER, DAUGHTER OF MR. AND Mrs. Bernard S. Carter, of Morgan & Co., Paris, will be presented on Nov. 9 at a large ball at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel . . . Miss Carter is a niece of Mrs. T. C. Thacher, Jr., of Pinckney st., Beacon Hill.

Attractive "Dickie" Whiting has been week-ending at Yonder Farm, Dublin, N. H., visiting the Charles Barnard Princes who have taken it for the season . . . his mother, Mrs. Max Whiting, was also a guest. The Whitings have recently visited the Channing Wells at Wianno on the Cape . . . a very popular family, the Whitings. They have a handsome estate at Manchester-by-the-Sea.

HORSE SHOW ACTIVITIES -:- -:- KEEP THIS TRIO BUSY

MRS. PHILIP BENSON MRS. JOHN MARSHALL MRS. JOHN BISHOP

THE HORSE SHOW SEASON is nearly over, but these society matrons are as interested as when the season first opened. You see Mrs. Philip Benson, Mrs. John Marshall and Mrs. John Bishop, all of Cohassett, watching one of the events at a recent show. They are seen at the majority of the horse shows held in and around Greater Boston. The horse shows have attracted large crowds of society folk during the past few months and the competitions for the blue ribbons and trophies have been the keenest in years. (Boston American Photo.)

New Styles of the Fashionables

By Dorothy Whipple Fry

WITH the pendulum swinging back once more to prettiness, ruffles and furbelows, tight waists and flowing skirts, one wonders if the rule of "prunes and prisms" will be in vogue for the young. It would be amusing indeed to see young ladies of fashion as demure and decorous as their great grandmothers are supposed to have been for really you know there is just as much vogue in manners as there is in smart frocks.

More and more attention is being paid to charming speaking voices and even the very young are trained to appreciate and practice good taste in dress. One likes to think of this year's bevy of debutantes as knowing the merits of poise and graciousness.

For example there is Miss Anne Wicks, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Wicks, tall and blonde with laughing blue eyes and a radiant smile. Her favorite shades are brown and soft yellows in which she appears altogether charming.

Then there is Miss Camilla Alsop, travelling, abroad this summer with her mother and making her debut this season at an early autumn tea at the Alsop family home in Milton. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. O. Alsop of Pleasant st., Milton. She is a most accomplished and charmingly mannered young lady and she wears her clothes in the latest mode.

Then there is Miss Katharine Baker who is summering at Scituate and attracting so much attention with her excellent diving and swimming. She is petite, slender and always exceedingly well dressed. Red is a favorite shade of hers and in that trig cherry colored hat of the sailor persuasion with her brown curls protruding, and a bright red coat to match she is a most attractive figure. Her eyes are blue and full of the sparkle of fun, and we predict a delightful season for her. She is a graduate of Beaver Country Day school as are the aforementioned debs.

Another Beaver graduate who is making her formal bow to society this season is Miss Avis Wodell. She is tall and slender with red-gold hair and dreamy grey green eyes—very attractive. She is full of fun, and exquisite shades of greens and blues to offset her gorgeous hair are her favorite colors.

Speaking of attractive debs, there is Miss Edith Katharine Phelps, petite and a decided brunette with lovely dark eyes, clear skin. Her hair is dark brown and attractively waved in her neck. A good looking green ensemble is one of her smartest trigs. She wears yellow and brown, too, and especially trig is her yellow print frock.

Last Sales by Veterans in Mountains

The closing week of the sales conducted by the Disabled Ex-Servicemen's Exchange will take place in the White Mountains.

Mr. Howard V. Dalton, manager of the Maplewood Club, has offered the facilities of the club to the Exchange for an exhibition and sale today. Tomorrow the Sunset Hill House at Sugar Hill will be the scene of the second sale of the week, through the courtesy of Mr. John E. Haslam.

On Wednesday, an exhibition will be held at the Forest Hills Hotel, Franconia, through the courtesy of Mr. Karl P. Abott.

Steck - Johnson Engagement Announced

Mrs. Samuel Johnson of Hinckley rd., Milton, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Frances Johnson, to Mr. Lee Varner Steck of Oakland, California.

Miss Johnson, who is the daughter of the late Samuel Johnson was graduated from Milton Academy and from Smith College. She is a member of the Junior League.

Mr. Steck was graduated from the University of California and is associated with the Shell Development Co. of San Francisco.

Miss Helen Frances Hayes of Brighton to Be Bride Soon

AN ENGAGEMENT OF INTERNATIONAL INTEREST is the betrothal of Miss Helen Frances Hayes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Hayes of Brighton, to Mr. Robert John Savoye, of Ostend, Belgium. Miss Hayes is a graduate of Mount Saint Joseph's Academy and of Teacher's College, Boston, and will receive her master's degree in February of next year.

Mr. Savoye is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Savoye of Ostend. He is a graduate of Antwerp and Brussels Universities and received his doctor's degree from these schools. He has spent some months in this country in research work and is vice-president of a Buenos Aires, Argentine, concern of which his uncle is president. No date has been set for the wedding.

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES CASEY, with Mrs. Casey's brother, Mr. Francis P. Mutrie of Brookline, and his fiancee, Miss Alice Boyden, whose engagement was announced last week, were among the guests for race week at the Worden, at Saratoga Springs.

MR. AND MRS. AUGUSTUS WHITE of Newton announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Audrey Marie, to Mr. Richard H. Nolan, son of Dr. William F. Nolan of Jamaica Plain. Mr. Nolan is manager of the Presidential Country Club. Miss White is a graduate of the Academy of the Sacred Heart and Manhattanville College.

Being one of a group of aspirants in the Women's Golf Championship Tournament, at the Exmoor Country Club, at Highland Park, Chicago, Miss White motored to Chicago accompanied by her fiancee, his sister, Miss Margaret Nolan, and Mrs. Foster Hughes. She will be the house guest of Miss Josephine Bremner during Chicago. Miss her stay.

THE DELIGHTFUL summer Mrs. V. F. Roberts home of Mrs. Vincent P. Roberts, at North Scituate, was the setting for a luncheon for the members of the Philomatheia Club, of which she is president, this past week. Mrs. Roberts' home is deeply admired for the beautiful gardens it contains and the house was abloom with flowers for the guests. She is a familiar resident of Boston, residing at 246 Beacon st., and is well known in many charities.

AT THEIR SUMMER HOME at Hatherly Beach, Scituate, on Friday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Watson E. Curley entertained at a party, a gay group of young folks, the occasion being the 17th birthday of their daughter, Eleanor. Mrs. D. J. Cantwell, the grandmother of Miss Eleanor, and Miss Mary F. Curley, an aunt, were the hostesses. Those attending were the Misses Ann and Priscilla Simpson, Betty Johnson, Marjorie Harrington, Louise Hennerberry, Eleanor Spillane, Rose Byrd, Mima McKenzie, Adelaide Walsh, Marie, Virginia and Grace Curley.

Acting as escorts were Messrs. Albert Curtis, Paul Dugan, Alfred Berry, Walter Johnson, Robert Hoey, Leon Young, Douglas MacPherson, Donald McLean, William and Edward Hasean, Thomas Holmes, John King. Among the younger married group were Mr. and Mrs. Pierce E. Buckley, Dr. and Mrs. Charles H. Pelton, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Clancy and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Clifford.

Woolens for Daytime Street Wear

Really smart women know the secret of wearing a spectator type sports costume on the street. It is only by being comparatively simple in the daytime that they can appreciate the distinction that comes from being luxurious in the evening.

The entire personality goes through a subtle change. The woman seen on the street in a tailleur is often hard to recognize in an evening gown. Her hair is dressed more elaborately, her jewels (real or not) are taken out from hiding, her gown is of a rich fabric, her figure swathed like a sheath—in fact, a new individual emerges! It is because she likes this day-to-night transformation that she dresses in simple tailored clothes during sunlight hours.

While this year's daytime silhouette is simple and very wearable, it is new. It is tightly fitted, straight and often belted. Fabric combinations are often unusual. Necklines have climbed higher than ever, a fashion that demands extra care of your skin since attention additionally is directed to the face. Waistlines are normal, skirts usually ten inches from the floor.

Tweeds are daytime classics—this year they're quite prominent for sports and street. Some of the most exquisitely made have dark blouses that contrast in color, though not in fabric or design. The blouses are sheerer, but identical tweed.

The interest in ornaments for those costumes grows. Many trimmings that were fashionable in 1900 appear in the most important collections today. With well-tailored suits, wooden buckles and buttons are also smart. Newer still are those of pale leather—perfect to complement hardy fabrics. Some woolens have contrasting suede pipings at each seam—and no other decorations.

The suit in two tones of taupe gray in the accompanying picture has been enjoying an enormous success. It appeals to the commuter, the shopper, the active spectator.

In the circle we call attention to a tailored sports accessory ensemble designed by John Frederics. It could be one of many ideas to change the appearance of this suit. A particularly effective color combination is the set of velveteen resembling tweed in gray, black and green. Gloves, hat, bag and scarf are identical in design and fabric.

Extreme contrast between a tailleur and the luxurious evening gown is described at length in the accompanying article.

Stone - Austin Betrothal Is Announced

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Adele Haines Austin of Toronto, Ontario, to Mr. James Kent Stone, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Philip K. Stone, of Monmouth Court, Brookline. Miss Austin is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Franklin Austin. Under her pen name, Dorothy Perkins, she has written for numerous Canadian and American periodicals. She is a member of the Canadian Women's Press Club, the Royal Canadian Yacht Club, the Granite Club and the Mississauga Golf Club.

Mr. Stone prepared at Noble and Greenough for Harvard where he was graduated in 1907. His clubs the the Tennis and Racquet and Harvard Club of Boston. He is a great grandson of Chancellor James Kent of New York state. His mother, the late Mrs. Anne Blake Abbot, was the daughter of the late Dr. Samuel L. Abbot, for years on the staff of the Massachusetts General Hospital, and of Eliza James Hoppin of Providence. Mr. Stone is connected with the brokerage firm of Lapham, Potter & Holden.

A very quiet and informal wedding is planned for Sept. 16 at Toronto. It is expected that Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Sigourney, Miss Georgette Binney and Mrs. Josiah R. Harding of Brookline, a cousin of the prospective bridegroom, will be the only guests from Boston.

Chatty Notes of Society

AMONG THE RECENT VISITORS in New York City are Mr. and Mrs. Albert M. Creighton of Boston who are guests at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. Miss Barbara Proctor of Commonwealth ave. has also been a guest at the Waldorf. Miss Proctor is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Proctor. Her marriage to Mr. Richard Hildreth Thompson of Marblehead is to be one of the important September ceremonies, taking place on the 16th, at Swampscott, where her parents have their summer home. She was accompanied to New York by her sister, Miss Frances Proctor.

MRS. JOHN F. NANGLE of Bass Rocks, has had as a house guest, Miss M. Connie Gaffney, who won the prize at the Rockport Artist's Costume Ball, for the most grotesque costume. Mrs. Nangle entertained at dinner, a number of guests, before the ball.

* * *

MRS. JOHN MURPHY and Miss Margaret Murphy, of Saganore, are spending a delightful few weeks, as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene M. Perry at Nantucket.

AMONG THE RECENT ARRIVALS at the White Whale Inn and the Tavern on the Moors, Sconset at Nantucket, are Miss Eileen Priest, of Wellesley and Francis Whitten of Malden.

SACHET BAGS OF FRAGRANT MEDICATED INGREDIENTS USED IN BEAUTY TREATMENT

Listen World! Why Do I Love You?

By ELSIE ROBINSON

I DON'T know Roy Croft. But "Dorothy S." has sent me a little poem which he wrote and I'm passing part of it along with my thanks to him. And presently you'll be clipping it, too, and sending it on again to someone else. For it's about that one thing which means to all of us, does most for all of us.

Elsie Robinson

LOVE

I love you,
Not only for what you are,
But for what I am
When I am with you.

I love you,
Not only for what
You have made of yourself,
But for what
You are making of me.

I love you
For the part of me
That you bring out;
I love you
For putting your hand
Into my heaped-up heart
And passing over
All the foolish, weak things
That you can't help
Dimly seeing there,
And for drawing out
Into the light
All the beautiful belongings
That no one else had looked Quite far enough to find.

I love you because you
Are helping me to make
Of the lumber of my life,
Not a tavern
But a temple;
Out of the works
Of my every day,
Not a reproach
But a song.

I love you
Because you have done
More than any creed
Could have done
To make me good,
And more than any fate
Could have done
To make me happy.
You have done it
Without a touch,
Without a word,
Without a sign.
You have done it
By being yourself.
Perhaps that is what
Being a friend means.
After all.

—Roy Croft.

Just by being yourself—and believing.

Believing in the good; ignoring the bad.

Believing you can be strong as you secretly think you can be; believing that you are as honest as you really want to be, and as clean and kind.

There's the whole lovely mystery of love! And if that mystery has happened just once to you in all your life—if just one person has given you such tenderness and tolerance and faith—then you are rich. No matter what happens afterwards; no matter what heartbreak or shame or poverty or distress you may know; if you have once been touched by love like that, you have known the best in life. And you can always be proud!

What would this poor, said world be like, I wonder, if we could all pass on such faith? Not sermons. Not threats. Not criticisms or punishments. Just FAITH? Would it heal you, and help you, and lift you out of any gutter, if someone believed in YOU like that? Then what would it do to the other fellow—I wonder.

FOR SCHOOL

For more information about these clothes, please write or telephone Margaret Matson, Boston Evening American, Liberty 4000.

Judith and Jean Hatch, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Royal A. Hatch of Malden, illustrate what the well-dressed school girl will wear this fall. Below, coats are well tailored and without fur, hats will slide into pockets without crushing. Middle, a twin sweater suit with wool skirt dyed exactly to match the color of the sweaters. The lingerie collar is detachable, tubable and practical. Top, ginghams in bright colors and with plenty of shoulder room, as well as "growing" hems. Even chubby little girls can be fitted perfectly in frocks like these.

Ask Your Young Daughter if You Want to Know What She Should Wear to School

By Charline Davenport

HERE IS NEWS, indeed, for most of us. We understand from good authority that most children know more about the kind of clothes they should wear than their adult relatives. Also, that if we do not dress our little ones correctly, we plant those dreadful little seeds of inferiority complexes and other psychological hurdles which they spend the rest of their natural lives trying to jump.

There are two essentials for the little girl's school wardrobe. The skirt, sweater and blouse combination, beloved in the hearts of most of young feminine America and the jumper dress with its little wash blouse.

Let us take up this sweater and skirt proposition first. A little plaid skirt and a plain English type sweater are natural affinities, and for a change of scene one can have a gay striped sweater and a plain skirt.

Now for the practical elements of this costume. The skirts have sturdy cambric waists that unbutton from the skirt and so to the wash tub. There is also a little vestee arrangement with a neat Dutch collar which can be adjusted under the sweater for that bit of white around the neck —all kept in place with a sensible, easy elastic band around the waist.

Hats for the young! How awful some of them are and how perfect are others. School hats should be either softees or berets so that they can be pushed in a pocket, crammed in a corner, flung on a rail and still come out looking like a hat—and as if it hadn't left the store more than five minutes previously.

The leather jacket, soft and pliable and made long for comfort and warmth is an excellent choice for the first school term.

Getting Tired of Your Wife?

By HELEN ROWLAND

MY DESCRIPTION of "The Perfect Bore," entitled "How to Shake a Woman," has met with such heartfelt response that I am impelled to go farther and give some points on "How to Get rid of a WIFE."

* * *

What's the use of spending all that money to send your wife to Reno and to pay her lawyers when you can make her life so miserable that she'll cheerfully buy her own ticket or run off with another man?

Helen Rowland

Never, by any chance, get to your meals on time, or come home when you promised. There is nothing a woman enjoys so much as hanging over a hot stove, on an empty stomach, for an hour or two. And then eating a dried-up dinner.

Never listen when she speaks and always answer in grunts or monosyllables. Make her realize that she's a dumbbell and couldn't possibly say anything that would interest you.

It's SO easy to make a woman hate you or to drive her to look around for a "soul-mate" when you have breakfast opposite each other every morning. But if you follow all these simple rules—don't blame ME if she shoots you!

Beauty Specialist Has Created a Corrective So Pleasant One Welcomes the Need of It

By Therese Deschamps

ONE OF THE MOST common annoyances in the realm of beauty is the little blackhead. Even the fairest and most faultless of complexions is sometimes marred by these tiny black spots. What causes them? The pores get clogged. Either the pores themselves have not been working with perfect efficiency or the blood stream hasn't done its duty or little specks of dirt have found their way into the skin. The wise person examines her skin for the first little black heads regularly and washes them away ever so often.

It isn't the easiest thing in the world either. Simple washing with soap and water and a rough cloth will not dislodge them as a usual thing. Especially if they have remained for any length of time. They must be washed out with a gritty soap or pressed out with the fingertips, and the latter must be done ever so carefully to avoid marring the skin itself.

Clear the Skin

Here is a way to rid your skin of blackheads that is so pleasant that you almost welcome the need of employing it. There are some little fragrant sachet bags that one steeps for a few minutes in hot milk or hot water and then holds over the area to be cleaned until the pores are dilated and the blackhead itself is drawn up to the surface, where it can be pressed out with no trouble whatever.

One first cleanses her skin thoroughly with cream or soap and water. If she uses cream, she next applies a generous amount of skin tonic to take away every last vestige of oil. Then she steeps the sachet bag in hot milk or hot water and applies it to her face. When the skin is quite soft, or after a few minutes, when one is certain the pores are thoroughly opened, one removes the bag, covers her fingertips with cleansing tissues and gently—ever so gently—presses each tiny blackhead out. The more gently one presses the less danger there is of harming the delicate surface of the skin.

Mild Tonic

If the skin is dry or fragile, the next application should be of a mild skin tonic to close the pores, and following this a spreading of rich nourishing cream.

If, however, the skin is oily, there is need for a special astringent to close the pores more thoroughly. And in the case of enlarged pores there is a pore cream which has astringent qualities which one should apply after the tonic or astringent and leave on for an hour or more.

It is most imperative that the pores be closed immediately after the blackheads have been pressed out. Otherwise the dilated pores would fill immediately with impurities from the air.

If you wish to know the trade name of the sachets mentioned in the article above, please write Therese Deschamps, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston, and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request. This column is continued in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Beauty Questions and Answers

Brushing Will Help

Question: Will you tell me whether or not the vinegar rinse you mentioned in your column is drying to the hair? Will brushing help to keep the hair glossy? Mine is dead looking and brittle. Any suggestion to improve the condition of my hair would be appreciated. M. G. L., Whitman, Mass.

Answer—Lots of patience, Miss M. G. L., meticulous care and you will be rewarded with glossy locks, I assure you. First try hot olive oil shampoos at least every other week. Warm the oil and massage it into the scalp with the tips of the fingers firmly and with a rotary motion. Then wash the hair with a good shampoo and rinse it with clear warm water only until you have brought the condition of your scalp back to normal. Would suggest daily gentle massage of the scalp rather than brushing, or any wave will be brushed away. Vinegar rinses are a bit drying, yes.

Try a Hobby for Your Health

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

IT IS NATURAL for youth to disregard the fact that years are passing and old age is approaching with almost unbelievable speed. Perhaps that attitude of mind is the chief joy of early life. It is cruel to disturb it.

Dr. Copeland

As a matter of fact, I shall not propose that you give up a single one of the many things you love to do. If they are healthful, stimulating, decent and proper, go ahead with them. As the Preacher said in the book of Ecclesiastes:

"Rejoice, O young man, in thy youth, and let thy heart cheer thee in the days of thy youth, and walk in the ways of thine heart, and in the sight of thine eyes."

One of the great mistakes men and women make, men more than women, is not to have an avocation, a diverting hobby of some sort. Women have needle-work or some similar occupation to busy their hands and divert their thoughts. But may I say to them, too, that the cultivation of some sort of a fad is not a bad idea.

How is health maintained? It is by keeping the heart active, sending cleansing and purifying blood to body and brain. That keeps the muscles elastic, the vital organs in a state of normal vigor, promotes digestion and clear thinking. It keeps you feeling fit and promotes good nature. It makes you a desirable companion. A real interest in life has this effect.

Prepare for old age by doing every day those things that stimulate the heart. The surest way to do this is to cultivate and practice a hobby.

Hospitality Tray to Serve With on Informal Evenings

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Monday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

WHEN WE SIT DOWN to count our blessings in the Martha Lee Cooking School, we give special thanks for the many electric appliances that make our culinary days so much easier and pleasanter—specially for our electric mixers which have taken so much arm weariness out of our cake and cookie making, egg beating, cream whipping, etc.

We have just come from an electrical exposition, determined to add some of the newest numbers to our present equipment. The new hospitality tray—a great big shining tray with black bakelite handles, in the center of which is enthroned a two-slice electric toaster, is flanked on the left by a cutting board and knife for shaping sandwiches and canapes, and on the right with six crystal glass dishes for flavorful sandwich butters and fillings.

New Idea

Think of the joy of just plunking this down in the middle of the bridge table after the game and letting your friends make their own sandwiches while you bring on the coffee? It is the first new idea in evening refreshment since the day the chafing dish make its first bow. Guests adore making their own canapes at the cocktail hour (tomato of course) and there's an infinite variety of three-decker sandwiches that can easily be achieved for Sunday night suppers, to say nothing of informal eats, kitchen raids, midnight snacks in the game room (basement to you and me) when Dad's gang assembles, the absentee hostess can sleep sweetly knowing that aside from some empty 8.2 bottles, there'll be little mess to clear up, thanks to the hospitality tray with its generous supply of rye bread, Swiss cheese and Liederkranz, liverwurst, deviled ham, pickles and what-not.

Electric Casserole

Another possession we give thanks for is our thrifty-cook electric casserole in which, at an expense of 2c an hour for high heat and 1-3c an hour for low heat, we prepare the most tender and savory stews, fricassees, meat loaves, Italian spaghetti, baked beans, Hungarian goulash, choice gravy, chickens browned in cream, and au gratin potatoes.

You can put any of these on early in the afternoon, put the cooker on to low heat and depart with the knowing that when you come home three or four hours later you'll have a delicious supper awaiting for eight people—piping hot all ready to serve.

We're thankful also for our electric iron with the adjustable automatic heat control that does away with the "sizzling finger." It's temperature is easily adjusted from 600 degrees for damp linens, down to 350 degrees for rayons and silks.

An egg cooker—handsome enough for any table—a baby's food warmer that will save many a chilly expedition to the kitchen in the dead of night, and a double sandwich toaster with removable waffle grids are three more favorites. This sandwich toaster is really a gem. It opens out flat to give you double cooking surface for pancakes or toasted English muffins, closes firmly over single or three-decker sandwiches or melba toast or clamps over bacon until it is done to absolute perfection.

Bridal Shower Invitations

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

We have been having quite a serious discussion as to whether or not married women are invited to bridal showers. I can see no reason why, if these women are friends of the bride, they should not be invited, and have decided to ask you for your advice.

A.

I agree with you . . . there is no reason why married friends of the bride-to-be should not be invited to the bridal shower.

town. Tom has told me such delightful things about you, and I want very much to know you and to meet your husband again.

If this plan will be agreeable and convenient for you will you be so kind as to tell me the day that would be most convenient for you?

Best wishes to you both from Tom and me, and the hope of seeing you soon and of welcoming you to my home.

Cordially yours,

Coming home from work one night, my chum and I boarded the Elevated in the tunnel. There were two seats empty. My chum sat down immediately and I turned around to do the same. Imagine my embarrassment when I sat right on the lap of a man who squeezed in ahead of me.

The Keyhole on the News

Ozone Investment

The man was clearly baffled by his situation, but he wouldn't put up $500 bail, although he had more than that sum on him.

"Well," said Commissioner George Lilly, "in lieu of bail you'll have to go to jail until we reach the case on the docket. There's no way out of that."

On the way to jail the man turned to Deputy Marshal Murphy and changed his mind.

"Tell the driver to take us back to the court—and don't spare the hosses," he said. "I was going to make a down payment on a car; pay for a suit of clothes that's waiting for me; take some people to dinner and have my teeth fixed. But the more I think of it the thing I like best in the world is the open air. I'll have about $500 worth, if y' don't mind."

Matchless

Lester Stevens, Boston and Rockport artist, leaves a heavy smoke screen along the route from home to town each day. Mr. Stevens smokes a pipe the gargantuan bowl of which holds exactly five ounces and when it is filled for the morning jaunt—little remains to be done in the way of smoke preparation.

"I am the sort of man who never can keep track of his matches," Mr. Stevens explains, "and this pipe is the answer to that form of woe. At one time when I used to smoke cigars a friend of mine gave me a Christmas present. It was one cigar and five dollars worth of matches."

Remember?

The days when lunch carts really rolled around Boston, seeking patronage. They weren't classy at all, but they were regarded as decent and the patronage mounted slowly from sports crowds to theater and finally to even opera crowds. "Dog carts" they were, though a horse pulled them anywhere that an appetite might be located and stilled. The food was good, hot and tempting, the time was right, the cost was slight and the change was right. Sometimes as many as 15 or 20 of these wagons did a rushing business at Scollay on theater nights. The gay, gay nineties! Remember?

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and it does not move down doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas blows up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes these good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent substitutes. 25c at drug stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

MOTHER, BABY SAVED IN FIRE

A woman and a child were rescued, six families were driven to the street, and damage estimated at $1000 was caused when fire broke out early today in the three-story wooden apartment house at 8-10 Dalkeith st., Roxbury.

Mrs. Irene Diamond, 26, unconscious from smoke inhalation, was carried to the street by firemen who used a respirator on her and then called police of Division 9 who took the woman to City Hospital. She was also suffering from concussion of the brain and contusion of the forehead, said to have been received in falling out of bed.

Her six-year-old daughter, Charlottis was taken to safety by firemen, who found her asleep in bed. Harry Diamond, the father, was not at home.

According to police the fire was caused by careless smoking and started in the Diamond apartment on the top floor of 10 Dalkeith st. Leon Grossman, living on the first floor, discovered the blaze and turned in an alarm.

Police said that Mrs. Diamond, awakened by smoke, tried to get out of bed and fell, striking her head.

She was lying unconscious on the floor when Ladderman Frank McNamara of Ladder 23, with James Powers, William Dervan, Frank Connors and Charles La Plante of Rescue Co. No. 2, broke into the room. Four of them took the woman to the street, while the fifth carried the little girl to safety.

Free Beer If Connors Is Mayor

"CIGARS" IN FEAT

Johnny "Cigars" Connors—that Famous Marathon Runner, that Colorful and Picturesque Character," writes Mr. Connors himself—is running again.

Today he announced himself as "a candidate for Mayor, in a field of bluff candidates who will be pie for me."

The irrepressible Connors who runs in all the Marathons while puffing cigars (he sells them) and often finishes first (with the aid of an auto) announced his "candidacy" in a letter to the Boston Evening American. Mr. Connors, who is no slouch at speaking for himself, speaks as follows:

"Dear Editor—Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock I'll be at the Election Comm-office, Taking out and filing as a candidate for Mayor of Boston. So I'll be there sure for any story of Picture you care to take of me.

"STONY BOOK CANDIDATE"

"They Call me the Stony Brook Candidate from Roxbury cause I'm always running. Either for Public office or in a marathon race. I received 1000 votes for State Senator From wards 9-10-11 in 1932, was also a Candidate for State Senator in 1910. Ran for Boston City Council in 1917.

"Every one in Boston knows Johnny 'Cigars' Connors, that Famous Marathon Runner that Colorful and Picturesque Character. The only Gent who smokes 8 Cigars at one time. The one and only original 'Cigars' Connors. The likable Irishman.

"When I'm Elected Mayor of Boston I won't need any secretary's. The Door will be left open.

FREE BEER, CIGARS

"I'll give all City Laborers $5.00 a Day for 5 Days. I'll give free Cigars and a Glass of Beer to all who come to the Mayor's office.

"When I'm elected mayor I'll get rid of all these politicel humming-birds, songsters and would-be opera singers, and so-called heels, who are getting fat salaries and running up big telephone bills.

"This field of Bluff candidates will be pie for me.

"The only Gentleman I'm somewhat afraid of and may give me a rub or a Close Battle will be the ex-mayor Malcolm E. Nichols. But I've got it all over him as an orator. All the rest will be just flat tires. I'm going to see Mayor Curley Wednesday and Park Comm. William Long to get the Parkman Bandstand for a monster Rally for next Sunday."

Connors' presence in the mayoralty race will be viewed by many as the only thing needed to make it the most interesting in years. Some qualifications he neglected to mention are running up the Custom House stairs in record time and jumping from barrel to barrel, blindfolded.

HITLER STARTS SAAR DRIVE

Berlin, Aug. 28 (INS)—The German campaign for recovery of the Saar Basin territory was in full swing today following a dynamic speech by Chancellor Adolf Hitler in which he declared "Germany never will abandon the Saar!"

The speech was delivered to a throng of 150,000 gathered at the Niederwald monument, near Ruedesheim, on the Rhine, which commemorates German victories over France in 1870.

It was the inauguration of the German drive—now a distinctly Nazi nationalistic drive—to win the Saar in the plebiscite to be held under League of Nations direction in 1935.

"We have declared a hundred times we do not want war, but if treaties are sacred they are not alone for us but for our opponents, as well. We want agreements with France on all points, but never will Germany abandon the Saar, nor will the Saar abandon the Reich!"

Girl Clerk Catches Thief in Brockton

Brockton, Aug. 28—Miss Hazel Eaton, 18-year-old clerk in a Main st., store, was today receiving congratulations as a heroine. The girl grappled with a youth who tried to loot the store's cash register and caused his arrest. He was Jeffrey Grosan, 18, of Oakland st., recently released from reform school.

20,000 in Silk Mills to Strike

Patterson, N. J., Aug. 28 (INS)—Twenty thousand workers in the broad silk industry will strike next Thursday, officials of the American Federation of Silk Workers predicted today, unless an agreement is reached with employers calling for a 30-hour week with a minimum wage of $36.

A strike call was issued by the central executive committee of the silk workers union after conferences over wage rates and hours.

Seven thousand workers in the broad silk industry here will be effected by the call, Frank Schweitzer, executive secretary of the federation said, while about twice that number throughout the country will join them.

Mediation efforts, aimed at bringing employers and workers to an agreement, are expected to get under way in a day or so by NRA and federal labor officials.

Providence Officer Wounded in Gunplay

Providence, R. I., Aug. 28—Patrolman Walter Entwistle, 30, attached to central police station, was shot in the right forearm at 3 o'clock this morning in a gun duel with an unknown gunman in Westminster and Dean sts. He was taken to the Rhode Island Hospital here, where it was found that the bullet had shattered his right arm and forearm.

Raymond Connally, 28, is sought as Entwistle's assailant.

JURY TO VISIT LAMSON HOME

San Jose, Cal., Aug. 28 (AP)—A promise of surprise testimony by both the state and defense was made today as the trial of David A. Lamson, accused of beating to death his pretty 28-year-old wife in their cottage on the campus of Stanford University last Memorial Day, moved into its second week.

The defense, through Chief of Counsel E. M. Rea, said it would ask that the middle-aged jury of seven men an dfive women be taken to the cottage where Allene Thorpe Lamson was found lying in a blood-stained bathtub.

OPERATOR 13 -:- -:- By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

Captain Gailliard Finds Lucille Alluring

Read This First

Gail Loveless, young as she was—just 20— had had a thorough training as a character actress under the tutelage of her accomplished friend and fellow artist of the professional stage, Pauline Cushman. Miss Cushman had served as a spy for the Union army. Now it was necessary for her to go again into the Confederate lines at Martinsburg, Va. Gen. J. E. B. Stuart needed watching. It was feared he intended to lead his reckless, gray-jacketed riders into Pennsylvania on a devastating raid.

Miss Cushman asked if she might take Gail Loveless with her. Pinkerton, head of the Federal secret service, and his aide, Colonel Sharpe, seeing the younger girl impersonating an octroon, were convinced of her ability to fool the Sutherners. They said she might go and assigned to her as an agent of the secret service, the number 13, which had been borne by another spy, recently captured by the Southern army and hanged.

A few days later Gail Loveless, as Lucille Lyndon, "yeller gal laundress, had the good luck to be assigned to the headquarters of Gen Stuart himself. And there, while she washed a shirt in a swift little river, came Capt. Jack Gailliard, foremost of Gen. Stuart's spies, to flirt with her lazily in the mellow sunshine. He kissed her and was ashamed of the thrill it gave him. Shortly afterwards Pauline Cushman was arrested as a spy. Operator 13 refused to flee and save herself when a man spy offered her the chance to go. Pauline was condemned to be hanged but Operator 13, slashing the prison tent with a knife, set her free and she escaped. Operator 13 was "loaned," as laundress, by Gen. Stuart to Belle Boyd, most famous Confederate spy. Miss Boyd completely deceived, told Gailliard that the girl was harmless.

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

It was useless for him to swear that his heart was hers alone. La Belle Rebelle only jeered. 'At Major Von Borck's dance you gazed more romantically at other girls than you did at me."

"Because, mademoiselle, you gazed more romantically at Lieut. Price than you did at me."

A slight color tinged the ivory of her cheek. "Why not, sir? He, at least, behaved as though he adored me. But you ignored me! You even looked oftener at little Lucille, the laundress, who was serving punch, than you did at me!"

To his consternation the blood instantly heated his sun-browned cheeks.

"You ought to blush," said the girl, "for your neglect of me. That shows you still have a conscience and are not wholly hardened."

She laughed at him again as her father and mother came up the path the former, who looked worn and ill, wearing the uniform of the Second Virginia Infantry.

"Mother," she cried, "I am the toast of the camp and even Gen. Stonewall Jackson calls me his 'dear child.' And yet this bad young man thinks that our little Lucille is better worth looking at."

For the first time in his irresponsible and near-devastating career, this popular young man found himself confused and embarrassed, utterly unable to make his forced laugh sound genuine. Even La Belle Rebelle was surprised at the effect of her innocent raillery.

However, he managed to say his farewells with graceful propriety, and took himself off, raging inwardly. What the devil had happened to him, that a light jest from a girl should set his face aflame and knock his common sense to bits?

Instead of walking he began to stride, as though to outdistance whatever dogged him. For, in his anger, he seemed to be vaguely aware that something was dogging him. Something definitely disturbing. Furiously he began to realize what it might be—for his mind's eye already beheld it, materialized it—the phantom of a slim, brown girl with eyes like dark-tinged orchids and lovely hands and naked feet.

Vespasian Chancellor, returning from the cavalry regiments up the river, riding his bony old sorrel racker, reined up on the Bower road.

He had, he said, discovered no trace of this mysterious operator 13, of whom Richmond warned them. The provost guard at Darkesville had arrested a dozen people, so far, but all had proper passes, and he had nothing against any of them.

"No, suh," he repeated to Gailliard, "this hyar Federal operator 13 is none of these people. Maybe we ought to look for him in our own uniform.

"I've been through the recruits in the Ninth and Tenth Virginia and Second South Carolina cavalry today," said Gailliard. "That completes the search of the cavalry division. I think we should look for this ghostly No. 13 among servants and camp followers at all regimental and brigade headquarters."

SUSPICION.

Chancellor remarked that he had already done so. "Somehow or other, captain," he drawled, "I can't get it outen my haid that the quadroon laundress, Lucille Lyndon, is into this business."

"You heard her testimony at the drumhead court last week?" inquired Gailliard with nervous emphasis.

"I did, suh."

"The court found nothing against her."

"No, suh."

"Well, then, why do you suspect her?"

"I been asking myself is she a suah-enough nigger?" drawled Chancellor. He ruminated awhile, and finally concluded: "Yaas, I reckon she's black. But they is black snakes, too."

"What puzzles me," he continued, "is my feelin's. Sometimes my feelin's work like a hoss-dawg's nose. I got a instinct. Yaas, suh, allus had a instinct when things are not right. Keeps pesterin' me till I find out."

"You had that instinct about Pauline Cushman," said Gailliard gravely; "and you were right. Have you that same instinct concerning Lucille Lyndon?"

"Wall? suh, it's hard to say. Sometimes I reckon she's my gran'ma I hain't. Seems like some days I feel she's not all what she oughta be. An' then again I reckon she's only a pore ill-reared gal an' the silliest thoughts an' her pretty haid is to giggle an' kiss."

"You mean carryin on, suh?"

"Yes."

"I reckon she's a armful. Yuh know how young colored girls carry on. An' next thing they have a baby."

Gailliard reddened and swallowed hard. He said: "I don't think she's that sort. She's been a lady's maid. That kind of superior colored girl usually is clever enough to have care of herself."

"Not with a white young master, suh."

Again the young man reddened. "Yes," he said, "I have kept an eye on her since the general sent her to the Boyds'. Because—well, there is careless talk at the Boyds' table—not only among young staff officers, but in high command. Any servant can pick up vital information at a dance or dinner table."

"Yaas suh. An' I don't deny they do pick it up an' somebody sends it to the Yankees. But what saves us is that the damyanks don't know what to do with vital information."

They laughed, and the tension relaxed.

"Look at Little Mack over there," continued Chancellor. "I make no doubt that one of their courier scouts carried news of the Pennsylvania raid to Major Allen; an' that he took it to McClellan. An' what do they all do about it? Why, they scatter their cavalry all over the continent, chasin' shadows that ain't yet started. An' Colonel Imboden already has drawed them off the Potomac fords."

"That's the trouble," said Gailliard; "Gen. Stuart won't wait for us to catch this operator number thirteen."

"No, he won't wait?" said Chancellor. "All the cavalry are ordered to Darkesville tonight."

"Then they'll go northward tomorrow?"

"I reckon."

DEEP CONCERN

"I haven't the faintest idea where to look for this damn Yankee spy," said the young man. "We have our agents in every marching regiment; and not one of them has discovered the slightest clue. Of course, there could be a tank with a telescope, hiding out somewhere hereabouts. Lord knows there are enough woods and thickets and mountains.

"I was, suh, we've had spies of that breed. But they don't know how to count troops or horses or guns. What we should fear, suh, is a Yank in our camp, sneakin' around an' listenin'. An' last night orders from Richmond were read aloud to every regiment of foss in this hyar division. I ask you, Captain Gailliard, is that fair to us in the secret service? No, 'tain't. We can't be responsible. Wasl, I am ridin' out, suh. Old Stonewall wants I should get through an' look over things. I take a expert view, tapper—Bullings."

"You'd better be careful. We've stirred up every Yank north of the river."

"Yaas, suh," drawled Chancellor. "An' I aim to watch our line of couriers between Richmond an' Baltimore. That's the road any Yank would follow outen the valley. An' if they's any gallopin' north tonight, takin' news outen this camp to Little Mack, I aim to stop it."

"Do you want m to go?"

"Why, the provost guard——"

"I know, suh. I mean nobody." There was a strained pause.

"Hit's my instinct workin', suh." "I see. You mean that I should continue to keep an eye on Lucille?"

"I do, suh."

Another silence in the young man's head heavy pulses were throbbing, and he felt the cold of apprehension.

"Have you discovered anything at all?"

"No, suh, not a damn thing. It's only my feelin's that won't quit pesterin' me."

Warmth stole into the young man's chilled veins again. "Very well," he said quietly. "And be careful." He stood looking after the chief of spies, who put his racker to a gangling canter.

"No, suh. I'll ask you politely, suh, to see that nobody leaves camp till the cavalry rides out of Darkesville."

About sunset, without bugle or trumpet, the gray-jacketed cavalry began to pass toward the rendezvous at Darkesville, a quadron trampling after squadron. John Pelham's guns were on the way, too, followed by a section from Hart's horse battery—all moving toward McCoy's ford and destiny.

The fine mansion on the hill, known as Bower House, or The Bower, was ablaze with candles. They were dancing there as usual; colonels, majors, staff officers, even Gen. J. E. B. Stuart himself, gayly, with Belle Boyd.

Jack Gailliard prowled the verandas, peering in on all the brilliancy and listening to the voices and laughter. But Lucille Lyndon was not among the black servants. Whether she was strolling by the river with a dark-skinned beau or not—alas!—with some white soldier, pre-occupied him, and he meant to find out.

He had a horse at headquarters—a fine, nine-tenths thoroughbred. An orderly saddled and bridled the nag. Captain Gailliard mounted and rode slowly down to the Opequon through the clustered starlight set with a new ring.

A white-clad figure stood on the Boyds' lawn. To his rage his heart suddenly beat quickly; and he felt the blood stinging the tanned skin on his cheeks.

"Damnation!" he muttered to himself. "Am I crazy?" He bungled his stirrup as he dismounted, nearly fell; then tethered his horse to the gate-post with shaky fingers.

LOVELY PICTURE.

She was all in white. A white rose was pinned to her kerchief. She was the loveliest thing he had ever looked upon.

"Good Lord!" he said to himself. But to the little laundress he said "Evening, Lucile. What are you doing down here all alone, with so many dusky beaus waiting for you down by the river?"

"Evenin,' Cap'n Gailliard," she replied, in her soft voice, "it ain't bother my haid 'long of any camp nigger."

"You demand quality in a beau, don't you?" he asked walking toward her.

"Yes, suh; quality." She added impertinently: "Colored or white, suh, but it boun' to be quality."

"Didn't I warn you against unprincipled white men?" he demanded sharply.

"Yes, suh, but I ain't scared of nobody."

"You think you know how to look after yourself, do you?"

"Yes, suh. I think I does." She fingered the white rose pinned to her kerchief.

She was very near him; her starched skirt touched his leg. His heart began to bound. The little laundress looked at him, faintly smiling.

Suddenly something blazed darkly in his brain. And then she was in his arms, warm and yielding. A moment—not brief—before he released her. Neither spoke.

Then her voice, soft, unsteady, said with a little laugh: "That is why yuh came, suh" To kiss me'"

It was a moment more before he could force a laugh "No," he said; "that's not the reason. I want to talk to you."

She giggled: "Pretty way yuh have of talkin', suh."

"I thought I'd better begin that way," he said, "because the rest isn't pleasant. In fact, it's disagreeable. I want to ask you bluntly whether you ever repeat to strangers anything you hear in the Boyds' house."

"Strangers?" repeated the girl innocently. "I don't know any."

"You don't know everybody in camp, do you?"

"Most everybody," she said.

"I know you're very popular," he said. "Everybody spoils you—the general the Boyds. All the officers have a pleasant word for you. And, I'm sorry to say, most of the soldiers make eyes at you. But that's not what I mean. There are strangers in camp every day—farmers, planters, peddlers. Do you talk to them?"

"I pass the time of day with polite folk that talk me howdy, suh."

"Do you gossip? I mean, about army matters? Conversation you hear when officers come here?" She seemed confused.

"I mean, do you babble to anybody anything you happen to hear?"

"I dunno," she murmured in evident perplexity. But her dull voice and hanging head made it plain to him that here was no clever enemy to the Southland; no framed spy planted by Major Allen; nobody dangerous to the Confederacy, save innocently.

He drew a long breath of unconscious relief. It would be terrible to discover in this young dark, pretty thing anything evil enough to hang. He looked at her lovely throat and neck and a slight shiver passed through him.

"Why yuh ask me all these questions, Cap'n Gailliard, suh?" she inquired with a childish simplicity that shamed him.

"Oh, well, I know you are all right."

"Yes, suh, I am."

He began to walk to and fro under the stars, his hands clasped behind him. The girl watched him a silence Then, abruptly, he bade her good night, mounted his horse and was off in darkness at a gallop.

The girl stood unstirring as long as she could hear his horse's hoofs on the road.

When the distant sound had died away she went into the house, do one of the Negroes of the establishment, was snoring in the hallway. Others seemed to be in the kitchen across the yard.

The little laundress went up the stairs to the landing and paused before a closed door. Here Miss Boyd's little sister slept

Very cautiously Lucille Lyndon opened the door. The child was sound asleep Now gently closing the door, she stole across to the room which in her quality of personal maid and laundress had been allotted her In the room also slept Miss Belles own maid, but she was at Bower House today

When the girl had entered her room and lighted a candle, she noiselessly locked and bolted the door. The first thing she did was to lift her white starched skirt and cotton chemise. Under it, belted around her naked body, was a big knife in a velvet sheath.

This she slid out and pressed a spring in the buckthorn hilt, which proved to be hollow. Out of it she drew some small bits of tissue paper, a tiny magnifying glass, a crow-quill pen scarcely thicker than a hairpin; a fine sponge, a small camel's-hair brush and three glass phials.

First of all, she dipped the brush into one of the phials and, with it carefully stained the half-moon at the base of her fingernails a bluish color. Then she touched the base of each pretty toe.

Then, completely disrobing and removing her leather belt, she filled a tin washbowl with water and let fall into it a few drops of black liquid from another phial. Then she went over her entire body, face and limbs with the little sponge—the liquid drying in a pale amber tint

Now she replaced the two phials and the sponge and brush in the knife hilt, and dressed herself

The big Cherokee rose lay on the table. From it she detached a broad heart-shaped petal, laid it over a little square of tissue paper, and, with a pair of sewing scissors, cut the tissue into the shape of the rose petal. Then she sat down at a pine table, dipped her crow quill into the third phial and wrote on the tissue paper—though her wet pen showed no stain of ink and left no trace of writing

"Capt Allen:

"Stuart crosses McCoy's ford tonight, October 10th, riding north toward the mountains. Mercersburg and Chambersburg.

"Two thousand cavalry, four guns. Operator 13."

SILENT WAITING

This bit of tissue she pinned to the white rose in place of the petal detached, and the lovely flower appeared to be perfect again. Now she deliberately rolled together the single detached rose petal and the shred of tissue, swallowed the pellet, extinguished the tallow candle and went lightly to her window.

No light, now, in the quarters; all was still. Not a sound save the hushed tinkle of the silvery Opequon

She opened her door, stole downstairs. Hanging in the hall closet was an old slouch hat of Mr. Boyd's. There were a pair of spurred boots there also. She pulled on the boots over her slippers, stole to the veranda and on to the dew-wet lawn.

No light, now, in the village; nothing visible yonder except ghostly white porticoes, shadowy gallaries and tall, still trees in the starlight. For the first time, the little laundress felt afraid—or perhaps it was the chill of the river mist that made her so cold

She went up the road, then through an orchard to the open meadow. Not a glimmer of light in Darkesville. Nobody could guess that two thousand gray-jackets were standing to horse down there, or that galloping mounted artillery awaited only a whispered command to the gunners astride their horses.

She could neither see Bower House nor hear the distant dance music Down along the river not a sound from the sentinels and gray-jacketed videttes; only a low belt of fog lying an invisible shore.

It seemed a century—it was less than twenty minutes—before she heard a horse coming, not fast. In a few moments the hoof-beats ceased, and she saw a ghostly shape of horse and rider approaching.

When the horseman saw here he dismounted and led his mount toward her.

"Evenin', suh," said the little laundress softly. "Hit's a night of stars."

The pass-phrase of the United States secret service

The horseman replied with the prescribed answer:

"Yes, it's a night of stars and bars. How many stars do you count?"

"Thirteen."

"Add thirteen to ninety."

"One hundred and three. And the answer is?"

"The Union forever."

Operator 13, in deadly peril, manages to win out for this time, at least. Read tomorrow's installment of Chambers' greatest story of love and danger.

"Operator 13" is the type of story that appears regularly in the Cosmopolitan Magazine.

THEY WERE ALWAYS WARNED AND WAITING FOR ATTACK

Union cavalry commanders complained bitterly that they could not surprise Jeb Stuart or Fitzhugh Lee. When they sent a force against them, always they found a larger Confederate force facing them, to smash the blue lines with cannon and rifle fire. Southern spies were largely responsible for that, so Gail Loveless, Operator 13, was later sent to halt the mysterious work and to capture those to blame, if it was within her power.

Suspicion Aroused Of '13'

SKIPPY---A Premature Bath -:- -:- By PERCY CROSBY

Thieves Routed by Cambridge Dog

Ambitious burglars might well keep away from Wendell st., Cambridge, unless they want to court the same thrill of two who were routed by the pet shepherd dog of 14-year-old Helen Lees.

Burglars were trying to enter the apartment of George W. Hilly and W. O Metcalf, Harvard students, when Helen happened along with her dog.

The big shepherd broke away from his young mistress, chased the would-be thieves through several back yards, but finally lost them in the traffic along Massachusetts ave., Cambridge.

BARTHELMESS IN INDIAN ROLE | All Chipper | BRILLIANT ACTING IS HEPBURN TRIUMPH

Dick Given 'Massacre' Role That Was Intended for Paul Muni; Dix in Film for M-G-M

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
Copyright, 1933, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Aug. 28—Hand Richard Barthelmess a media for using good judgment on his pictures. He turned down "Shanghai Orchid" cold because he didn't think it was a suitable story for him. Dick a insistence upon good stories is one reason that he has flourished over a longer period of time, probably than any other screen actor. His next picture is "Massacre originally intended for Paul Muni.

"Massacre" based on a novel by Robert Graemer, is an unusually strong story in that it deals with a graduate Indian from Carlisle University who returns to fight the battles of his people. It will all be in modern dress.

Sidney Lanfield, Director of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, He is called in today as the big-he picture in Forever Faithful" to be directed Russell Ma Mark said d over the dec tion of the Hollywood Party to Richard Bois always very will concentrate on the Dix opera. By the way, that a very nice little contract Joyce and Louella Parsons Selznick arranged for Dix He makes two pictures for Radio within seven months, the first of these is "Sinners" opposite Irene Dunne. During the three months between Radio picture No. 1 and 2, Dix can go wherever he chooses to make a picture.

Marian Nixon Picked

You can take it from me that any of these film players who get an offer from London, Germany or France to make a picture will stay in Hollywood if given the preference. Marian Nixon was a victim to want to make a picture in London but national events when Carl Laemmle called her in and asked her to play the feminine lead in "Invisible Ray" Marian accepted with alacrity. Onslow Stevens, who played opposite Marion Davies in "Peg o My Heart," draws the male lead. Junior intends, this coming year, to make young Stevens a male star. Also in the "Special Investigators" cast are Alan Dinehart, William Collier, Sr., Edward Van Sloan, John Wray and Lyle Talbot.

Lee Tracy Is Smart

That boy Lee Tracy is pretty smart. He is a male Constance Bennett and knows enough to look out for his own interests. He is under contract to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. But during his layoff he arranged to make a picture for Darryl Zanuck. Isn't that the way Bennett arranged it when she got the extra Warner Brothers films? He will be the male element in "Lonely Heart." I almost said "Reason," but I reckon he plays the lad who promotes those "Lonely Heart" get-togethers.

Chatter in Hollywood

The appearance of Jack Kerrman and Willard Doeming, Radio comedian, at the Ascot auto races every Wednesday night is responsible for the continued run of their engagement. This is over, is strenuously denied the girl who, only a few ago, was the little blonde in "Our Gang" comedies doubt that Doeming is much interested in Mar she very young and plenty of time to be thinking marriage.

Gets RKO Post

Congratulations to RKO for their selection of John I Johnstone, screen and ful press agent for the New post of advertising director of their theatre circuit. Left of the most active members of the Wampas has been director of Universal Pu Corp. for the last few years Before that he was with Columbia, Edwin Carewe and others. We will all miss him and are sorry to see him go, but we wish LeRoy good luck and are glad to hear about the award. He leaves for New York Sept. 2 and his successor has not yet been named.

A Line or Two

New York won't be seeing Peggy Fears for a long time. She is going to give Hollywood a season of plays in which she will act as producer. Her first "Skylines" will have Carmel Myers in the leading role. Mary Duncan without her best beau, Laddie Stanford is coming to Hollywood. She is wanted at the Twentieth Century Company for one of the feminine roles in the Constance Bennett picture, "Moulin Rouge." Lou Brock is bringing Eric Hoer to Hollywood for a series of shorts. He is English and a comedian. Think of it, Lulu McConnell, one of our former Ziegfeld "Follies" stars, lights here for a brief three weeks. Mr. Darryl Zanuck who has persuaded her to drop everything and come here for a part for him. Gilbert Roland has been offered a job by British International, but he likes Hollywood. Reports from Acua Caliente are that Peggy Hopkins Joyce is ensconced in the pavilion at auto races, is apparently forgetting her movie troubles.

Snapshots of Hollywood

JEANETTE LOFF back in town, escorted everywhere by B. F. SERLIS, San Francisco and Reno stock broker. MAUREEN O'SULLIVAN, back from her forehead in true cotton fashion, with JOHN FARROW at the Colony Club. CLAIRE WINDSOR still worried over the pending lawsuit with DOROTHY HELLER at the Colony. MISS HELLER, brought here from a movie career, resembles KATHARINE HEPBURN. KATHRYN MENJOU postponing her trip to Honolulu. WHITNEY DE RHAM, scion of a wealthy New York family, doing an ABRAHAM LINCOLN with a beard. He is a member of the Carpegna South Seas expedition. The JESSE L. LASKYS entertaining with a buffet supper Sunday night. MARY CARLISLE, bossed by EDDIE HILLMAN and chaperoned by JACK WOODY, at the Vine Street Derby. GLORIA SWANSON hostess at a cocktail party. LILLIAN HOGAN, a sister of ROGER DAVIS and KATHERINE McCARTHY, which fact. They threw a stinky party at the Roosevelt. LOLA LANE and LYLE TALBOT just too, too cooing at the Russian Eagle Gardens. The JACK CONWAYS gave the SAM WOODS and the IRVING THALBERGS a dinner last night. KAFFY WILSON entertaining. Cuisine by VICTOR HUGO. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Hollywood takes sometimes to recreation that has all the elements of toil. For instance Edward G. Robinson enjoys himself most at his ranch, and about the place he is Jack of all trades, counting no job too humble, even to milking the cows. The news photographer motored over on the chance of snapping an unusual picture of the movie star. And sure enough, there was "Little Caesar" himself, in the woodpile, with Mrs. Robinson nearby.

Star Rises High in New Movie at Keith's

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Out of the swaddling clothes and into the full garb of great acting steps Katharine Hepburn in "Morning Glory," film feature marking the opening of the RKO Greater Show Season at B. F. Keith's. In her two previous pictures she could be hailed as a "new personality"; chiefly; now her triumph is one of brilliant performance, placing her in the front rank of screen players.

Hitherto she nailed attention by her stalking figure, a strident voice, a habit of odd clothes. Of golden talent she gave the hint of more to come. Now it is here. So different is she, you may set her down as still a newer personality. Softened are the harsher tones; in brief she creates a vivid, vibrant role, the best character study to date in the cinema for this year. And so effective is this slip of a girl that she dominates the screen, even above theme, and director, even above oldtimers of long film experience. "Morning Glory" is made fascinating by her. It is given a glow such as only genius can infuse into a conventional story with all its shortcomings. By her gift it lives and shrobs, through her inspiration it takes on astonishing charm, for her effort it can be thankful for being lifted into a compelling offering in the new season's photodramas.

A small town lass feels the inner fire; and arrives on Broadway. There she falls in with the usual moth and candle adventures. Adolphe Menjou is the theatrical producer and Doug Fairbanks, Jr., the playwright of the piece. In the entanglements humor exudes, sometimes a twinge of pathos! But at best it would contain nothing of novelty, did not Miss Hepburn give it the rainbow touch of glorious and astonishing color and power.

Richly she shades her every line, her every gesture, her every mood! Instead of the conventional backstage play, the movie seems a rare treat. That, surely, is as much as any star at Hollywood or anywhere else could achieve.

For support, Mr. Menjou is his wonted polished and captivating self; Mary Duncan has a big role as a temperamental leading lady.

It should not be omitted that Miss Hepburn's handling of lines from "Hamlet" and "Romeo and Juliet" give forecast of even greater things to come from her in better drama.

Honest Toil, No Joking, Says Jocund Joe

By JOE COOK
Star of "Hold Your Horses" (Shubert)

Letting the public in on showmanship secrets, is dangerous, they say. But I'm honest. Honest toil makes my mare go. Ah, there's my secret, and no joke about that! I do sweat (honest sweat it is) to get my results. Work, plenty of it, is the basis of my success.

* * *

All my jokes are the result of constant living.

All my tricks are the result of constant practice.

They call me the master mechanic of the jokecraft. Because of my gadgets. The more cranially ingenious—Now, how ingenious I can be, too!—I can be, the better you'll like me. It was with these tricks of mine I gained my first fame, so I will take that up now. The next later. The juggling, the playing of different instruments and the acrobatic feats and all the result of many rehearsals.

Starting in the profession as a wire walker at county and street fairs, I early developed an aptitude for athletic feats.

There is a stable back of my home at Lake Hopatcong, and in that I have arranged up a very complete gymnasium. Every day I spend a certain number of hours trying out new athletic stunts, for as everyone knows, you have to be just a season ahead of the current program to keep abreast of the times.

The dialogue humor is all a constant try. I take any subject that comes to mind and start with a line of talk which I think is going to create laughter.

Each bit has been worked out by constant toil. If I get a new something for a laugh I try it out at the first impromptu affair I attend, a banquet or some other gathering. If it creates a laugh I polish the idea up men talk and try it on an audience.

I have been given credit for a particular style of humor and have been asked for the secret back of the laughs. It is a simple idea. I have always contended that if I could do certain ridiculous things for the same time contrary to the spectator that I was taking the matter quite seriously it would be the source of laughter.

Fuchs To Give McKechnie New 4-Year Contract ↑ ↓ McKechnie Ends His First Term On Schedule

By AUSTEN LAKE

I do not expect you to say. Well, for pity sakes," about this, because you will have anticipated the business, and I doubt that it is even worth mentioning. But tomorrow Judge Emil Fuchs is going to sit knee to knee with Bill McKechnie in a contract conference that will renew Bill's tenure as manager of the Braves for another four years.

I say four years, which would keep Bill in Boston until 1938, because the original agreement which he and Fuchs formed over a Chicago hotel's breakfast table in October of 1929, established that unit of measurement and was the principal reason for Bill's leaving the Cardinals to come to Boston. For Bill, knowing the uncertainties of his trade, had stipulated a long term and he said, "Judge, I'll take the same money as in St. Louis, but I want to feel secure."

And Fuchs had asked how long he estimated it would take before he could build a pennant contender, and Bill had replied, without hesitation, "No less than four years," which, as events have turned out, shows Bill as a pretty accurate judge of time and distance.

I take Fuchs' willingness to write a new contract with McKechnie now, as a hint that his own financial tieup, which up to the moment had him hobbled by one foot, is fairly unsnarled. For McKechnie by his own assertion has linked his future on the Braves with that of Fuchs, having recently told a Cambridge sports gathering that he would go as the Judge goes.

"I'll stay only as long as Fuchs stays," he promised.

So that the Judge, in offering McKechnie an additional four-year security, is proclaiming before the world belief in his own surety. For, though he made no announcement of the fact, I know that he has remitted the salary-cuts of four of his players, whose wage he trimmed a matter of $3200 during last winter. I was sitting in his box during batting practice the other day when the four, one after the other, came up and thanked him with a bashful dignity. And Fuchs, who has a weakness for sharing his good fortune, merely grunted a spiral of cigar smoke, as the boys, including Berger, Maranville, Moore and Brandt, ducked their heads and bowed off.

McKechnie as a Pitching Economist

As a chronic idealist, Fuchs explains the steady rise of his club as due to his own recovered fortunes and an expression of restored confidence from his men, a whimsy that I have not the heart to dispel by pointing to the fact that the club has no greater paper value, and less if anything, than a year ago when the Judge's finances were apparently sound. But I do believe that the Braves' climb comes from some sudden, unexplainable blossoming of collective energies and what psychologists would call a mass idea. It is one of those things, in baseball as in other mob action, that grows for no reason. I give you the 1914 Braves.

This may sound like chop-logic, except that here we have the best defensive club in the National League, with almost the poorest batting punch and only two regulars, Berger and Moore, in the .300 class. And it would seem, considering fielding and pitching as negative forces, almost like bobsledding uphill in defiance of the natural laws of gravitation. For, excepting only Cincinnati, which is hopelessly in the doldrums, the Braves have scored fewer runs and hits than any club in the league, and on the strength of stolen bases are the slowest club, yet stand in second place and may yet win the pennant.

The explanation for this paradox is that the Braves have had super-pitching. And verily, doth not pitching reckon as 75 per cent of a ball club, according to the prophets like Walter Johnson, Connie Mack and John McGraw. Yea, the Braves have had the pitching, plus the fact that McKechnie, the league's foremost student of the craft, has nursed his bowlers with a shrewd economy and second sight that surpassed common understanding.

I say this, knowing that the tendency of sport writers is to bless a successful manager and blame a luckless one, with no analogy of the causes in either case. But I have heard McKechnie measure the personalities of his pitchers for their flaws and forgiveness too many times in the last forty years, not to realize that he has a human penetration and an insight into temperament that enables him to handle each man as a separate specimen. For the art of handling pitchers deals as much with the qualities of temperament and character as it does with mechanical skill and routine experience.

And Bill has said, "I have to live and travel with a pitcher for two years before I can get the best out of him."

Braves Running Along With No Spare Tires

It puts a different yardstick on major league management than the one Bill Carrigan gave me when he last managed the Red Sox. "Seven-eighths of handling a ball club," said he, "is keeping 25 men satisfied," as though Bill's office was that of a personal nursemaid and camp counsellor to a touring boys' school. And I'll wager that no more than four of the 16 big league bosses today attempt to go beneath the surface of their job or follow more than the usual "percentage," which is the familiar, time-worn word among baseball men.

For example, I believe that if McKechnie had guided either the St. Louis Cardinals or the Pittsburgh Pirates of this year, he would have lapped the National League field by this time and made the pennant almost a mathematical certainty. For both clubs have starved in the midst of pitching plenty. And though it is more often the case that the team makes the manager than otherwise, here are two cases where lack of the proper sort of management has spoiled good pennant material.

At the risk of being frowned down as a calamity hooter, I am telling you that Bill's fingers are in danger of becoming permanently waved from being tightly crossed lest an epidemic of hurts and bruises crop out as they did at this time last year. For the Braves only have one reserve infielder on the bench, young Dick Gyselman, and only one reserve outfielder, Joe Mowry, which is like taking a transcontinental motor tour without spare tires.

But lest you get the flutters, there is always Randy Moore, the Braves' chore boy who will play any position, furnish a fourth for bridge or mind your baby. And, believe it or not, one of the subsurface reasons that the club fetched Bobby Smith, the pitcher, from Cincinnati via the waiver recently, was because Bobby could double in the infield if the last fuse blew out. For Bobby served his apprenticeship under that inventive cuss, Dave Bancroft, who was forever experimenting. He made Bobby into a pitcher from a shortstop, tried to make "Red" Lucas into a second baseman from a pitcher, and once he even attempted to make a slugging outfielder out of a printer's devil. I must tell you about that sometime.

Feathering Their Nests at Tepee; Lucky Winners of Fine Prizes in Great Boston Evening American Contest and Fair Braves Rooter

Here is a section of the seething mass which decorated the left field stands at the Wigwam while the Braves were splitting even with the Reds, thus gaining half a game on the league leading Giants. Those with their heads encircled in picture are the first winners in the Boston Evening American fan feathers contest. The person with the Indian's headdress above his circle will be awarded $10 when he makes himself known at the Boston Evening American editorial rooms, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston. The person with two feathers above his head will be enriched $5. The third fan, with a single feather above his head will be given a pair of passes to any Braves game he desires to see. Tepee Tilt Today Aids NRA Drive

Twenty-five cents of every dollar taken in at the gate at Braves Field on the Braves-Reds game will be given as a donation to help carry on the NRA campaign in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Judge Fuchs made the generous offer of such a donation to Edward A. Filene, chairman of the Massachusetts State Recovery Board, NRA, to help that organization meet necessary expenses for the three months campaign to be carried on in this state.

Babe Phelps Sold to Chicago Cubs

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 26 (AP)—Sale of Gordon "Babe" Phelps, catcher of the Albany Club of the International League (Class "A") to the Chicago Cubs was announced today. Albany received $5,000 and Oscar Ille to Harry Taylor, first baseman who has been playing with Albany on option. If Phelps is retained by the Cubs after June 15 1934 the club will receive an additional $5,000.

Lee Wins 10-Mile Title for Third Time

Philadelphia, Aug. 26 (AP)—For the third time in his career Edward Lee of the New York Athletic Club is the 10-mile National A. A. U. swimming champion.

He outswam 38 competitors yesterday on the Delaware river to win the event in 2 15.2. Lee won the title in 1928 and again in 1931, the last time it was contested.

Ramey Vs. Cocoa Kid at West Springfield

Springfield Aug. 26 (AP)—Willie Ramey, lightweight of Grand Rapids, Mich., and Cocoa Kid, negro of New Haven, Conn., have been matched for the three-round feature at the West Springfield Arena Tuesday night.

Ramey and Cocoa Kid are scheduled in a list of ballyhooed bouts in a series under the promotion of Homer C. Rainault to decide an opponent for either Bruno Ross or Tony Canzoneri, the champs to take place early in October at the Eastern States coliseum.

CARDS DOWN, TIE GIANTS

New York Aug 26—Playing before a crowd of 50,000 the season's biggest attendance at the Polo Grounds, the Giants broke a string of four straight defeats by taking the first game of a double header to Frankie Frisch's Cardinals 7 to 1 and tying the second 5 to 5. The second affair was called at the end of the eighth on account of darkness.

Jerome Dizzy Dean pitched the Giants dizzy. The fast ball hurler, nothing more or less than a shuffling sin. Terrific Dizzy stopped Dean for the season's finish.

Hal Schumacher was called to the game for the first time since he pitched a no-hit game against the Cubs a year ago last July 9 in favor of Hubbell.

The Giants drew a blank in each of the second game's seven innings as the Cards scored a run in the eighth but Frankie Frisch saved the game by smacking one of Johnny Allen's offerings for a homer to tie the score. Medwick homered for the Cards with none on in the second and Berger did the same with the bases empty in the fourth.

The score by innings:

St. Louis	7	11	0
New York	1	5	0

Batteries—Dean and Wilson; Hubbell and Mancuso.

St. Louis	5	9	0
New York	5	9	0

Batteries—Allen, Carleton and Wilson; Schumacher, Hubbell and Mancuso.

218,000 Fans Watch Sabbath Baseball

New York Aug 28—Fans to the number of 218,000 sat in on major league baseball tilts throughout the country over the Sabbath, checking figures revealed today.

Cleveland's Municipal Stadium drew a top house of 80,000 spectators for the Indians-Senators twin bill. 40,000 sat in at the Polo Grounds and 40,000 attended Braves Field. The American League, with 111,000 watching, drew 10,000 customers more than the National League.

Girls Seek Curtis Cup in Junior Links Tilt

By BILL GRIMES

Through the untiring efforts of Miss Mary [illegible] former national title Miss Virginia Bascom Worcester to start defending her girls' junior championship cup at Segreganset [illegible] Mr. Fuchs has ever played in this event.

[illegible] champion-ship [illegible] Mr. Curtis announced a handsome silver cup per year to be competed for annually in the event. In addition to the cup, Mr. Curtis offered a dozen golf balls to each contestant tomorrow as a souvenir of the occasion.

Miss Bascom and Miss Scudder are playing better golf than at this time a year ago, when they went through three rounds of match play without any trouble.

Miss Cynthia Richardson, daughter of the well known O. P. Tom Richardson, will bear watching at Worcester. Miss Richardson is only 14 years old but she is a husky and with far more than average promise. Other than playing and golf tennis, winning the annual Father and Daughter tournament at Worcester two months ago Miss Richardson has had no experience in championship golf as yet, so go to Wood and opposing pairings as well as a score to take the line on. Anyhow instead she has entered the champion-ship for the sole purpose of picking up some experience.

There are four entries from the Hatherly Country Club. Miss Miriam Carroll, Miss Alice Janzten, Miss Julia O'Brien and Miss Ruth Carroll. Miss Barbara Clark, Miss Dora Fox, Miss Joanna Palfrey and Miss Nancy Swift will represent The Country Club.

Albemarle will have three standard bearers Mary Jane Hunter, sister of Dorothy the ex-champion, Leila Feinburg, Delores Rustin and Miss Muriel Manson, the daughter of E. T. Manson, the veteran golfer from Framingham; Miss Manson is expected to not only qualify but to give a creditable account of herself in match play.

VINES TANDEM IN OTHER SEMIFINAL

By JOE MOONEY

Adrian Quist and his partner Don Turnbull a couple of the boys from Down Under, stand today on the threshold of tennis greatness when they were to take the court against the United Statesmen George Lott and Lester Stoefen in one of the two semifinals in the national doubles at the Longwood Cricket Club, Chestnut Hill.

In the other semifinal bracket the billing read Ellsworth Vines and Keith Gledhill, seeded No. 1 and defending champions vs. Wilmer Parker, and Frank S... Jr.

You Can't Win 'Em All -:- -:- Or Steal 'Em All, Either

A record crowd of 40,000 of the frenzied sat on an object lesson at Braves Field as our Braves split with the Reds, 7-0, and 3-5, as they say in tennis circles. The moral is that you can't win 'em all, pal. Half a loaf was considerably better than none, however, as the Tribe gained on the league leading Giants. The telescope shot shows First Sacker Buck Jordan of the Braves out at home when, with Randy Moore, he tried a double steal in the first inning of the shut-down game. Braves lost this game. Hole - in - One Winners Are Rewarded Today

Paging Mr. Rowbotham!

Paging Mr. Francis Rowbotham of Dorchester, and seven other winners in the Boston American's famed Hole-In-One contest!

Step up, aces, and receive your prizes!

At 4 o'clock today, at the special tee constructed for the Hole-in-One contest at Franklin Park, before a large gathering of civic dignitaries, five men and three women winners were to be given their prizes.

Mayor James M. Curley, a contestant who failed to get in the charmed circle, but a dyed-in-the-wool golfer anyway, and Park Commissioner William P. Long, who almost belied himself into the prize winning class again this year, were expected to conduct the presentation ceremonies.

ROWBOTHAM WINNER

First prize winner, Francis P. Rowbotham, who scored a hole in one, won first prize. He was to receive a caddy bag and 12 clubs.

Second prize winner, Frank Hayes, earned a bag and 10 clubs.

Thomas King, fourth place winner, was to go home with a sports coat given by Kennedy's Clothing Co., Summer st.

And Rene Masciocchi, just under the wire for the men, rated three matched woods.

Three women were to receive rewards.

MRS. EDWARDS TAKES PRIZE

Mrs. Pearl Edwards, first place winner among the fair golfers, won a golf bag.

Runnerup Agnes Gutterman won an order for a pair of golf or sport shoes.

Finally, representatives of Brainerd Golf Club prepared to step up and gather in the Mayor James M. Curley team prize trophy.

Then were scheduled pictures, shaking of hands and hauling down the flag for another year.

And we'll be seeing you aces at the tee again next spring!

MAC SMITH IS OPEN WINNER

Olympia Fields Ill., Aug 28 – MacDonald Smith the new Western open champion, found his four rounds of Olympia Fields courses, three on No. 4, and one on No. 1 out no trouble at all.

His four rounds of 67-71-71-72 – 282 ... him a lead of one stroke ... the quartet two strokes at the golf four ... strokes at the three-quarters, and six strokes at the finish.

His nearest, and in fact, only pursuer in the first three rounds was Abelard of the Espinosas, Cognac, professional, but Abelard wilted in the stretch, and had to worry only about Tommy Armour of Medinah coming up on the outside than about ever catching Smith who was unstoppable in his attempt to make his Western open championship record three victories in four starts.

As it was Armour with 68-72 for his last two rounds, nosed out Abelard's 283, for second place.

Somerville Boys to See Braves Play

Through Judge Emil Fuchs Mayor Leon J. Murphy of Somerville today extended an invitation to Somerville youngsters up to 14 years of age to attend the Braves-Reds game at Braves Field Wednesday afternoon.

Tickets and transportation will be distributed to the lucky youngsters at the Union Democratic headquarters at Union square. Mayor Murphy asks for volunteer drivers and cars to bring the kids to the game.

HELEN HICKS IN GOLF LEAD

Exmoor Club, Highland Park, Ill., Aug. 28 (AP)— Brooting the same type of game that has captured seven consecutive titles this year, Helen Hicks of New York took an early lead in the race for the national women's golf championship medal today by scoring a 37, two under par, over the first nine at Exmoor.

Two shots behind the husky girl, who won the national title in 1931 and then failed to qualify the next year, was Miss Enid Wilson, winner of the English championship three years in a row. Miss Wilson was two under par through five holes but became a trifle wild with her tee shots the rest of the way, scoring even par 39 for the nine.

Most of the early starters were above the 40s on the first nine but Miss Lucille Robinson, Des Moines western champion, and Miss Jean Wilson, 20-year-old Chicago girl joined the English champion with perfect 39s.

Two of the top ranking contenders for the Championship, Maureen Orcutt of Haworth, N. J., and Mrs. Leona Cheney of San Gabriel, Calif., stuck in the medal round, Miss Orcutt scoring a 38 and Mrs. Cheney a 39. Virginia Van Wie of Chicago, defending titleholder, scored even par, 39 out.

BENEFIT GAME PLANS SHAPED

Mayor Curley, Judge Emil Fuchs of the Braves, and Eddie Collins of the Red Sox, met today to discuss plans for a ball game between the Boston teams' entire proceeds of which will go to the city's unemployed. The game will be played on Braves Field, Sept. 27.

Edward F. O'Dowd, secretary of the city statistical department, was placed in charge of the city arrangements and immediately called a meeting of Boston sport writers to further plans.

Mayor Curley suggested that a share of the game receipts be turned over to the Volunteers of America. The mayor said this organization was performing notable work in feeding 13,000 persons weekly in its Brattle st. headquarters at 1 to 6 cents per meal.

James C. O'Leary, dean of Boston sport writers, was presented with a 10-gallon hat which the mayor obtained from Tom Mix.

Curley and Fisher Top Amateur-Pro Field

West Voylston, Aug. 28—One week ago at Nashua C. C., Jack Curley, Stony Brae, won the New Hampshire open championship. Today at the Machusett Country Club here, Jack teamed with Jimmy Fisher, Bear Hill, Curley was leading a field of 19 teams in the weekly ... E. P. G. O. amateur-pro tourney with a gross 68.

Walter Cosgrove and Charlie Donnelly of the home club finished a stroke behind the leaders in a second place tie with Larry and Jimmy Gannon, who are representing Happy Valley.

Although only three teams grossed better than 70, the scoring was low due primarily to the excellent condition of the course, especially the greens, which are on a par with any in New England.

GO TO TURN IN

Curley and Fisher went to the turn in 33, three under par, and came back in 35, one under par, for a 68. They teamed exceptionally well, Fisher coming in on five holes, which were of great assistance to the New Hampshire champ.

Curley and Fisher had three birdies going out, two by the former. On the inward round, Fisher dropped a 20-foot putt for a birdie at the thirteenth and just missed holing out for a deuce at the seventeenth, where an easy three gave him a birdie.

Out ..... 444 334 333—33

BIRDIES KEEP CHIRPING.

Cosgrove and Donnelly were out in 35, slipping over par at the short fourth hole, where Cosgrove was in the woods and Donnelly trapped. They got back to par when Cosgrove pushed in a two-foot putt for a birdie at the fifth and went one under at the eighth, where Cosgrove dropped a 20-footer for another bird.

Coming in, they both got birdies at the long 11th, and Cosgrove chipped in from off the 17th green for a birdie 3, and Donnelly's 4 at the home hole gave them a 34 for the inward round, and a 68.

HELEN JACOBS IN DEFENSE OF MRS. MOODY

By DIXIE TIGHE

New York Aug. 28 (INS)—Helen Jacobs who has tried her court crown and called it "unsatisfactory" in her fourth cigarette in as many minutes, steadied her voice, and discussed the Moody-Jacobs case.

Whatever the tennis world may be debating in the matter of the Moody default, it certainly cannot debate the sportsmanship of Helen Jacobs. She "regrets," but refuses to criticize the outcome of the match that toppled Helen Wills from her tennis throne.

"It's easy to sit on the sidelines and speculate as to the degree of a player's physical distress—I feel that only Helen Moody knew the seriousness of whatever pain caused her to default.

"Naturally, gaining the championship through default is unsatisfactory, but I would rather have had Helen quit than to have won by her subjecting herself to the possibility of permanent injury—and I understand that is what she feared."

NEW QUEEN WARNED

Neither of the Helens belonged on the court, apparently. Helen Jacobs admitted just before she left for a vacation that her doctor had warned her not to play in the matches. She refused to disclose why, but declared her doctor has forbidden her to play again for many weeks.

The signs of strain still evidencing themselves in nervous gestures, brittle words and suddenly wavering voice, Helen Jacobs said she wished Mrs. Moody had taken frequent time out during the game if it would have saved her the final default.

"I noticed that Helen looked tired after the first set—but I have often seen her look that tired. I had no warning whatsoever that she was going to quit. I had my back turned, getting balls to serve, when I was suddenly informed that I had won.

"It is untrue that I urged her to go on. I felt solicitous; I asked Helen if I could do anything for her, but I urged her to leave the court when she said it was too difficult for her to go on."

MOLLA SPEAKS MIND

Advised that Mrs. Molla B Mallory had said Helen Wills Moody defaulted "because she feared defeat," Helen Jacobs merely inquired, Really? She commented that Mrs. Mallory usually speaks her mind.

"The heat," defended Miss Jacobs of Mrs. Moody, "was enough to get anyone down and Helen Wills had the added distress of pain. I know what it is to play in that condition. I, for one, don't believe in making a martyr of yourself. It's vain glory. And Tennis is too fine a sport to have to resort to such tactics; it's not a game 'to the death,' and I'm glad Helen didn't place one in the position of taking the championship over her disabled form."

Miss Jacobs denied she and Mrs. Moody had any sort of personal differences.

MRS. MOODY COLD

"Helen Wills and I are certainly not close friends. We have, apparently, nothing in common. I do not see that we should be expected to cling to each other for the sake of photographers. Helen is certainly not a demonstrative person. I'd call her cold. And I cannot see myself ever making such a display of emotion."

Mrs. Moody sent Miss Jacobs no personal message before she left for the East, and Miss Jacobs sent Mrs. Moody none before she left for a vacation in Marblehead, Mass.

Mrs. Moody Was Ill, Suzanne Lenglen Says

La Baule, France, Aug. 28 (INS) —"I firmly believe Mrs. Moody quit only because she had reached the limit of her endurance."

This was the opinion voiced today by Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen, for many years undestated queen of international tennis, concerning the outcome of the American woman's championship at Forest Hills Saturday, when Mrs. Helen Wills-Moody defaulted to Helen Jacobs, the champion.

Mlle. Lenglen's views concerning the Moody-Jacobs match had been eagerly awaited throughout the world, for many observers professed to see a similarity between Mrs. Moody's withdrawal and Mlle. Lenglen's historic default to Mrs. Molla Mallory in 1926.

"I refuse to believe that Mrs. Moody quit for any reason other than she had reached the limit of her endurance," Mlle. Lenglen told International News Service.

"Some physical complaint was responsible, I am sure. Mrs. Moody is a great tournament player who under ordinary circumstances would play until she dropped.

"I haven't read a newspaper for several weeks, and I really don't know what is happening. But I was not surprised to hear that Miss Jacobs had won. I was convinced when I saw Mrs. Moody play at Wimbledon this summer that she was not in the best physical condition.

Hyperion Favorite in St. Leger

London, Aug. 28 (AP)—Lord Derby's Hyperion, winner of the Derby three months ago, today was installed the 5—2 choice for the St. Leger at Doncaster, September 13, last and longest of the three-year-old classics of the English turf.

Call over of the odds made Lord Durham's Scarlet Tiger second choice for the mile and six furlongs' journey at 7 to 1, with the French horse, Marcel Boussac's Thor, third, at 8 to 1.

Other odds quoted were Raymond and Feiucitation, 100 to 6; Foxbridge and King Salmon, who was second in the Derby, 20 to 1; Harinero, 22 to 1; Sans Peine, Young Lover and Light Sussex, 25 to 1, and Solfatara, 50 to 1, against.

'Tea Dance' Golfers of East Rapped by Gene Sarazen

Omaha, Neb., Aug 28 (AP)— There's a "tea dance aspect" about eastern golfers that Gene Sarazen, national professional title holder, says is causing championships to move west.

"The future champions will come from the middle west and the southwest," he said today. "There's too much of the tea-dance aspect to young eastern golfers."

He made the remark after he and Joe Kirkwood defeated Johnny Goodman, Omahas national open title holder, and Rodney Niles, Nebraska state champion, 3 and 2 in an exhibition best ball match.

As for Goodman and Bliss, Sarazen said he would not be surprised if they became as famous a team as Francis Ouimet and Jesse Guilford, of Boston. What they need is lots of play together, he said.

Charge Ump Robbed Giants in 5-5 Game With Cardinals

New York, Aug 28 (INS)—Bill Terry, manager of the New York Giants, National League leaders was white with anger today. He charged the Giants were "robbed when umpires ruled against them as they ended a game with St Louis, 5 to 5, in eighth inning darkness.

"It's tough to lose a game," said Terry, "but to be jobbed out of it by incompetent umpiring—well, anyway, I'm glad I didn't sock Umpire McGraw right between the eyes. At the time he made his last poor decision I was ready to do it."

JUNIOR SKIPPERS START SEARS CUP CHASE AT GLOUCESTER

DUXBURY CREW FAVORITE IN TITLE SERIES

By E. B. SCHRIFTGIESSER

Eight crews, each composed of three junior sailors, reported at the Eastern Point Yacht Club in Gloucester this morning to start the annual series that will decide the 1933 possessors of the Sears Cup and the national junior sailing championships.

Due to lack of wind, the racing committee decided to postpone the start of the first race until late this afternoon.

Eastern Point is not represented in this series, the North Shore title having been won by George Poor of the Plum Y. C. of Marblehead Neither is the Eastern Y. C. on the lists as defender, for Chandler Hovey, jr., winner a year ago at Marion, has passed the age limit and is not eligible to compete

DUXBURY PICKED

Duxbury won the South Shore junior title this summer and under Captain Ralph Lawson, jr., is one of the favorites in the series. Other competitors include the Vineyard Haven crew from southern Massachusetts; Westerly, R. I., as Narragansett Bay representative, Madison Beach from Eastern Connecticut, Larchmont Y. C. from Long Island Sound; Bayshore Y. C. from Great South Bay; and one fresh water crew, the Vermilion Boat Club from Ohio and the Interlake Y. R. A

The series of eight races is being sailed in Triangle Class boats lent by members of the Eastern Point Y. C. The judges include Hugh Wharton and George E. Hills. The crews will exchange boats after each race, a system of sailing inaugurated by the Eastern Y. C. when it held these races, and strongly urged by New England yachtsmen ever since the North American Y. R. A. took charge

SENIORS REST

The junior races are the one important event on the week's program while the seniors are gathering strength for Labor Day events. In Boston harbor the holiday regatta this year will be under the colors of the Winthrop Y. C. and all the racing classes hereabouts are planning to take part

All things come to him who waits, even a southwest wind. The Squantum Y. C. got its southwester late in the afternoon for its inter-club regatta over the weekend, but so late that for most classes the courses were not very satisfactory The Indians, for instance, got no windward work at all, since courses laid out for a southeast zephyr were not exactly right when the wind hauled into the west, in spite of the best intentions of the race committee.

80 RACE AT SQUANTUM

Squantum had 80 boats in its regatta, and would have had more if there had been enough air during the morning to get the racing craft across the bay. Billy Cohan of Cottage Park, Winthrop, sailed his Geraldine unopposed in the 15-foot class since no competitor was on hand to challenge him. The club, as usual, outdid itself in hospitality

The Speedy took I Class honors to the South Boston Y. C. when she beat the Nipper, the Rawding boat which kept her from the Quincy Cup. Bob Dalrymple in the Firewater was the best of the 22 boats in the Indian Class.

Grid Rules Meeting on Next Week

Walter R Okeson commissioner of the Eastern Intercollegiate Association, has announced the interpretation grid rules meeting at Hotel McAlpin, New York City on September 9 His notice is being sent to all member colleges and to all officials working for these colleges.

The program will start at 10 a. m. with a talk by Dr. Marvin A. Stevens of Yale on football injuries. Head Coach Herb Crisler of Princeton will follow on methods for prevention of injuries. Dr. E. J. O'Brien, Jr., will discuss the officials' part in preventing injury. Okeson will outline the changes in the rules for 1933.

REDSKINS OPEN GRID DRILLS

Evanston, Ill., Aug 28 The initial drill of the Boston Redskins was held here this morning under Head Coach Lone Star Dietz with 29 of the warriors on hand After a brief talk by Coach Dietz the squad went into action

Coach Dietz planned to devote three days to conditioning work On Thursday the squad will get down to developing the flashy type of attack which the Redskins will use this fall

Brockton Athletics Games Billed

Track and field followers will have a busy day on Sept. 14 when the Brockton Fair will conduct its annual athletic field day A list of events which will attract the outstanding competitors in New England has been arranged. The 10th annual modified marathon of 10 miles is to be run on the half-mile track starting at 2:30.

Events for the afternoon will include running broad and high jumps, pole vault, 100-yard dash, 220-yard dash, 440-yard run, 880-yard run one-mile walk, one-mile run, three-mile run and one-mile relay race

Entry blanks for the events may be secured from Horace A. Keith, 1090 Main st., Brockton

[illegible] started. The only vacant seats [illegible] the lot were in the extreme corners of the left and right field pavilions. More than enough one[illegible] men to fill those small open spaces turned away from the park because they couldn't get in the grandstand.

Ol' Petie Zachery gave one of his most finished performances in the opener He yielded only four hits and didn't issue a pass. He was found for a single and triple in the second, but a double play separated the drive, and he was never in trouble thereafter

Paul Derringer, who suffered his 21st defeat of the season, was tough for four innings. The Tribe got a break after making a run in the fifth and scored five more before the frame was over With Maranville on second and Urbanski on first and two gone, Jordan singled to send the Rabbit home. "Buck" head down, rounded first and thinking Urbanski had gone to third, kept on to second

When the ball returned to the infield, there was the strange spectacle of two Braves on the seventeen sack and 40,000 yelling insanely.

Jordan finally started backwards toward first and "Scarsky" Adams got the pill to Bottomley to head off [illegible] first-sacker off. Urbanski, meanwhile, set sail for third and Bottomley returned the compliment and the ball to Adams. Billy the Barber was first waved out and then safe at the hot corner

When little Donie Bush, enemy pilot, stopped crabbing over the whole performance, we had runners on second and third and a moment later the sacks were loaded by virtue of an intentional pass to Berger.

Then followed safeties by Moore, Whitney and Lee and that game was over

Boston Reds got away to a two-run lead at the expense of Fred Frankhouse in the third inning of the nightcap and the Braves never could catch up

Scooting before the wind, part of the fleet of 25 Indian class racers are caught at Squantum. Fresh, steady breezes made ideal weather for the little salt watermen. Among the yachts identified by the numbers on their billying sails are the Otoe (No. 28), skippered by Ed Bicknell of North Weymouth; the Tammany (No. 23), captained by J. McNamara of South Boston; Horatio Holland's Pelican (No. 14), and the Seminole (No. 32), owned by Archie Hayes of Squantum. Firewater, owned by Bob Dalrymple, won in 1:19:58.

Fighting Red Sox Send Welch After Browns

By DAVID F. EGAN

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 28—Having made last place practically safe for the St. Louis Browns, the Red Sox prepared to resume their series today with a single game at Sportsman's Park.

John Welch, the Sleepy Boy, was to endeavor to continue the exemplary brand of pitching that he displayed against the White Sox last Thursday when he struck out 10 of the vipers and won 6 to 1

Master Welch pitched to one Rogers Hornsby in the ninth inning of the first Sunday game after Bob Kline had suffered a slight relapse H did some arduous bull-pen duty before the critical moment, but the Red Sox pitchers do not mind putting in overtime for Foreman McManus, even without time a half

WELCH LEAGUES' VETERAN

Welch has been flirting around the big leagues since 1926, despite the fact that he is only 26 years old. They called him "Kid" when he joined the Chicago Cubs in 1926, after a season with Ottumwa of the Mississippi Valley League

A St. Louis boy, he stayed with the Cubs until the middle of 1928, hibernated to Reading, Pa., until 1931, and did penance in Newark, N. J., until he was traded to the Red Sox last May for Pete Jablonowski.

Our boys only split even in the Sunday bill, but sufficient unto the day is the victory thereof. The victory the Red Sox won the first game 7-5—was scored chiefly because of the ferocious hitting of Joseph Judge, Esq

The venerable Judge who says he is just getting into "shape," smacked three doubles and a single in five trips to the plate. He drove in four runs and scored another, so it is plain as the nose on my face that he played a most important part

It was Bob Kline who staggered through to victory, though he allowed a dozen hits and had to beat a hasty retreat with two out in the ninth. The big fellow lost twice in two days in Chicago and has been warming up for emergencies ever since but he managed to stay on his feet most of the way and so received the decision of the referee and official judge.

JUDGE MAKES ACE PLAY

Manager McManus became agitated in the ninth inning when with two out Reynolds scored on Burns' two baser to right and Melillo walked. Up came Hornsby as a pinch swinger, out went Kline and in came Welch

Curt Fullerton petrel of baseball slashed a grounder between first and second, but Judge flitted over stabbed it with his gloved hand and forced Melillo at second, despite the fact that he had to throw from an awkward position. It was just one more brilliant play in a career that has been full of them

Roy Johnson, you will note, played the second game against the advice of the club doctor. Both legs are strapped up, but Johnson played the entire game. He vowed that he would be in their again today

Grid Games Wanted

Any amateur uniformed football club averaging about 150 to 160 pounds, which wants 1933 football games get in touch with the Columbia Club, 89 Liberty st., Danvers.

HITCHCOCK OUT BROWN TO USE 3 WINGBACKS FOR SEASON

New York, Aug. 28 (AP)—Tommy Hitchcock is out of the polo wars for the rest of the season.

The world's only 10-goal player has been suffering from concussion of the brain ever since the second game of the recent East-West series at Chicago and has been forbidden to play any more polo until 1934

Hitchcock was thrown heavily in the first chukker of the second game, the only one the East could win, but after receiving treatment for an injured leg he re-mounted finished that contest and played all of the third and final battle

The leg injury failed to mend after his return east but there was no suspicion of any head injury until an examination by Dr. Foster Kennedy yesterday disclosed the brain concussion.

Dr. Kennedy told Hitchcock he would run the risk of permanent injury if he played any more polo this year and the star promptly announced his withdrawal from the national open championship next month and from any further competition this season.

Milton High Boy Gets Big Sandlot Support

By JOE MOONEY

For the first time since Judge Fuchs inaugurated his campaign to send a Greater Boston semi-pro or amateur baseball player south with the Braves next spring, one player seems to stand out above the field in the matter of nominations by the fans.

The young man who receives a nomination or two in almost every mail is Elburt P. Fletcher of Milton. Fletcher is a senior in Milton high school, where he plays first base and when not in uniform for his school he is the standout first sacker for the Mattapan Baptists. The fact that Fletcher is frequently mentioned in the fan scout mail this early in the contest will have an bearing whatsoever on the final selection of the player to go South

SEPTEMBER 25 DEADLINE

The contest will be open to scout coupons until September 25 After that date the winner will be selected by a committee of Braves officials. This committee will include Judge Fuchs, Bill McKechnie General Manager Fred Mitchell and Scout Johnny Evers

An advisory board, including Mayor Curley, Governor Ely and James Roosevelt will also sit in the final choice

Virtually no one position is heavily favored in the selections Taking the last batch of entries received as a sample, we found pitchers and first sackers in a slight lead over outfielders, shortstops next choice, third basemen and second basemen about the same, and afew catchers

WATCH CATCHERS

Don't overlook the catchers in scout Johnny Evers' suggestion Catchers get a little of the glory, but are all important in making a pitcher look good

Remember, no attempt will be made to select the winner until the contest closes September 25

No position is indicated by the Braves' committee. They are looking for the best looking ball player around in the semipro and amateur diamonds of Greater Boston. They don't care what position he plays, mail is Elburt P. Fletcher of Milton. Fletcher is a senior in Milton high school, where he plays first base and when not in uniform for his school he is the standout first sacker for the Mattapan Baptists. The fact that Fletcher is frequently mentioned in the fan scout mail this early in the contest will have an bearing whatsoever on the final selection of the player to go South

If you've got a favorite you want the major league scouts to put the peek on, here's your chance. Just fill out the coupons printed below, and your choice will be given the same consideration as any other nominee in the contest

And get your coupon in today.

It seems odd that the announcement of a proposed auto insurance rate raises in Massachusetts should come out now with the prosperity announcement of a company which carries a large part of the compulsory insurance. The company's announcement was that it had been showing a steady gain for several weeks.

The following comment, sent to this column by a [illegible] Boston investment banking [illegible] in line with what has previously appeared here:

"While majority opinion is to the effect that agricultural industry will be the prime beneficiary of the recovery, other basic lines will undoubtedly benefit from the enlargement of farm purchasing power. Payrolls Are Given Comparison

By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE
Editor, The Economist

The accompanying chart shows [illegible] statistical [illegible] which have caused the Administration a great deal of concern.

The heavy solid line represents factory employment as reported by the New York State Department of Labor. The broken line shows payrolls, reported by the same authority. The fine solid line shows the cost of living in the United States as reported by the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics.

During the latter part of June the government felt that a second [illegible] crisis was approaching due to the fact that production, particularly in plants turning out goods intended for immediate consumption, was proceeding at such a pace that no buying power on the part of the consumers then in sight could possibly absorb all this output. This fear was further accelerated by the fact that wages and employment seemed to be responding rather slowly to the improvement in business while the cost of living showed at least a slight acceleration to rise.

It felt that its next immediate task was to speed employment to give more workers jobs, and raise wages in order that they might consume the greatly increased output of American industry.

It may be recalled that department store sales for June [illegible] setting a rather complete measure of retail consumption in this country, failed to show any [illegible] tion, was proceeding at such a [illegible] ment over the previous month [illegible]

Hence the administration saw [illegible] industrial output, stationary consumption and wholly inadequate buying power.

It was this picture that led the government to organize the NRA drive that is now resulting in greater employment and worker buying power as indicated by the chart.

During the past month the output of textile mills, shoe plants and other industries producing consumable goods has eased off while on the other hand employment as reflected by department store sales has increased. Buying power in the form of payrolls has also gone up.

As a result, the government on this score at least is in a position to breathe more freely.

BRANCH BANK IN E. CAMBRIDGE

The County Bank & Trust Co. with main office at 318 Massachusetts ave., Central Square, Cambridge, has opened a branch office at 310 Cambridge st., East Cambridge. These quarters have been [illegible] thoroughly [illegible] modernized and equipped for banking service, including the latest protective devices. Savings accounts will be handled by the latest automatic savings bank bookkeeping machines.

The opening of this new branch is for the convenience of the commercial, individual and savings depositors in that section of East Cambridge. This is in line with the bank's policy, announced at the opening July 17, 1933 of the main office, of providing adequate and efficient banking service to Cambridge residents and industry.

The County Bank & Trust Co., which is a member of The Federal Reserve System, is capitalized at $300,000 and has a surplus and guaranty fund of $400,000. The officers are President, A. Oram Fulton; Vice-President and Treasurer, Myron C. Wilkins; Secretary and Assistant Treasurer, Benjamin H. Bowden. The new branch will be in charge of Armand Cote, Assistant Treasurer.

Bangor & Aroostook Deficit in July Less

Bangor & Aroostook reports July deficit after charges of $133,091, against deficit after charges of $157,227 in July, 1932, and deficit of $294,000 in 1931.

For seven months there was a surplus after charges of $771,091, against deficit of $224,867 in 1932 and $563,899 in the year previous.

Statement for July and seven months follows:

	1933	1932
July	$197,475	$214,067
Deficit before charges	240,884	371,077
Deficit after charges	133,091	157,227
Seven months' gross	3,729,538	4,253,856
Net before charges	2,212,874	2,374,534
Surplus after charges	771,091	224,518

Patino Mines Is Strong Feature

Patino Mines was a strong feature of the stock group. There has been buying of this stock both from Holand and English sources of late. It is interesting because a cartel controlling the output of tin finds its source in those countries and there has been talk that there will be an increase in output permitted this fall to take care of a probable increased demand.

Botany Worsted Mills Are Showing Profit

Because of a rising woolen market and economies instituted during the past two years, Botany Worsted Mills, operating unit of the Botany Consolidated Mills, Inc., in equity receivership, is now showing a profit, according to a letter from bondholders' protective committee headed by Franklin W. Fort.

Dividend Sessions Holding Interest

Four dividend meetings will attract important attention this week. The first two are Susquehanna & Ohio Railway and the Chesapeake Corp. sessions in Cleveland Tuesday. Announcements of the action taken at these meetings usually is not made known until the close of the market. An increase in the Chesapeake Corp. payment would not be at all surprising at this time, but the financial community is somewhat in doubt as to whether directors of C. & O will see fit to raise the dividend. Earnings for the year should run to not less than $3.80 a share on the stock, so it could increase somewhat the present rate of $2.60 annually, and stay well within the year's earnings.

Motor Output Ahead of 1931 Quarter

Estimates in motor circles output production for the current quarter will be at a considerable in the neighborhood of 675,000 cars, just about the same as for the first quarter of the year. The quarter got off to a flying start, with output for July running to 240,000 cars. August production, it is figured, will reach 225,000 cars, and unless estimates go much awry, September will carry the three months' total up to around the figure mentioned.

Production now, and sales, the are running well ahead for the third quarter of 1931. In that quarter, output fell to around 557,000 cars, compared with around 943,000 in the previous three months of that year. The manner in which both production and sales of cars have held up in the usually fairly dull late summer season has been distinctly encouraging to the motor-makers. Motor company and automobile accessory company shares have been among the leaders in the stock market, reflecting the upswing in business volume that has lead up.

Sugars' Dividend Actions Pending

The other two meetings are the South Porto Rico and Great Western Sugar Co. sessions. Talk of an increase in the Porto Rico Sugar payment and the possibility that Great Western Sugar may pay something on the common has been going the rounds.

Big Speculators Favor Free Market

It is no secret that many large speculators are anxious to see a free market for gold. There were unverified reports again that the Commodity Exchange has completed all arrangements to handle gold trading if, as and when an official proclamation permits it. In the meantime, the open market for the metal is to be a new high for the year in London and English speculators have been among the largest recent buyers of gold stocks on the American market.

Free Gold Market Rumors Persist

Perhaps the most frequently revived rumor of the past few months relates to establishment of a free gold market. Despite the fact that every recurrence of this report has as often been met by positive Washington denial, it refuses to die. Recent Hyde Park conferences between the President and the Treasury officials again inspired the story, without receiving much substance from the surmises as to the real nature of the conversation.

Public Participation Seen at Low Rate

Meantime, public participation in stocks has fallen to an exceedingly low state, according to the large commission houses and stock brokers. The reason for this is said to be that after margin actions put into effect by the Stock Exchange order several weeks ago, the [illegible] of the franc would be effected to [illegible] and not by stimulating business and foreign trade.

The newspaper Le Temps said that the government had a difficult task ahead.

"To reduce to zero the difference of 8,000,000,000 francs between the receipts and expenses of a country already overburdened and whose economy is suffering assuredly is not a small affair," the paper said, "It will call for great sacrifices on the part of the citizens and great determination on the part of the government."

BUSINESS RISE TO BE PUSHED VIGOROUSLY

90 P. C. of President's Inflation Powers Still Unused

New York, Aug. 28 (INS)—The past week's action should put to rest any doubts about inflation and the exercise of the presidential powers in that direction.

Fully 90 per cent of the President's inflation ammunition remains unused, but the week's bond buying program by the federal reserve shows that when there is need for some, he will not hold his fire.

The stock market for nearly two weeks has been making an assault on the June resistance level, but up until the past week had been unable to break through. On Tuesday, there was a leak in brokerage circles that a new drive would be launch on a government bond buying program to inflate credit.

The market that day just edged through this resistance point, which is 100 level in the Dow-Jones price index for 30 industrial stocks. The next day—Wednesday the market advanced to a new peak for the recovery, only to slip back at the close. The morning rise had been helped by statement by the NRA Administrator-General Johnson—banks were failing due to the [illegible] on mining loans and that the government would step in.

Thursday confirmation was obtained of the reserve's inflation plans, and stocks moved forward, and Friday with the announcement by the reserve itself the market soared.

On the week the market gained 6% points, with more than half the gain coming on Friday. The close Friday night was 103.07 in the industrial average, compared to 98.32 a week ago, and the low in July of 88.42.

The next resistance point is the 110 level in the industrial price average. This is the top reached in July, when the over-building of the liquor stocks brought a severe shake out in the market.

The thought now is that this level will again be approximated, with a technical setback around that point either this week or right after Labor Day. Then the fall rise should be resumed, with new highs in order.

In fact there is a good chance for the 1931 levels to be closely approximated and even eclipsed. In 1931, the market reached a peak of 194.40, the Dow-Jones price average in February. The low that year was 73.79. The present level, compared with that of September and October in 1931.

There is a conflict of Wall Street market opinion, the likely extent of the technical setback, if any, that will come. Some say the market had recovered 16.55 points of the 21.58 points lost in the July break or better than 75 per cent in a month.

At 110, the recovery would be 100 per cent. Some sort of a technical setback would seem warranted after such an advance. As to the extent of the setback, if it comes the chances are against anything like that seen in July. The market is now in a sound and stronger position. The character of the buying may be judged from the fact brokers' loans have been declining while the market has been rising. Last week there was a 41 million dollar drop in security loans.

This type of buyer does not bother about technical reaction like the public or the major trend, and that is up now.

Equity Corp. Goes On the Big Curb

New York, Aug. 28—The New York Curb has admitted to trading the Equity Corp. $3.50 shares of common stock, par value $10 each.

Curb has removed the following securities from unlisted trading privileges: Cleveland Union Stock Yards Co. no-par common, Compressed Industrial Gases no-par common, Diamond Iron Works no-par capital stock and Haverhill Electric Co. $25 par stock.

Free Gold Movement Predicted by Cox

In his first authorized interview since his return from the London economic conference James M. Cox, the Democratic Presidential nominee, told the Cleveland News that ultimate stabilization of currencies and world economic planning must come. "Free movement of gold will be established," he said.

National Standard Paying Adjustment

National Standard Co. declared an adjustment dividend of 80 cents and regular quarterly dividend of 30 cents, both payable Sept. 30 to stock of record Sept. 20. The adjustment dividend is declared to bring total disbursement for the year ended Sept. 30 to $2 a share.

$2,000,000 Bonds to Be Paid by Big Fair

Rufus C. Dawes, president of Century of Progress Exposition, announces 20 per cent of the Fair's bond issue of $10,000,000 will be paid Sept. 1. Last Friday's attendance established a new record—267,408 cash customers.

Market Effect of Inflation Tales Baffles State St.

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

State St has come to realize that the most potent market influence may be paraphrased in [illegible] "Inflation to come or not to come, that is the question." And it seems none is capable of supplying a definite answer. The whole financial atmosphere is heavy with doubt. Yet there are some who insist on participating in the market.

As we noted here Saturday this is not the time to rush in blindly. A mistake was undoubtedly made in not following the rally of last week. But to make an attempt to rectify it by buying strength is ridiculous. Too often such a procedure results in a second error of expensive proportions. The first simply was a money making chance lost.

DEPOSITS NEED UNFREEZING

Those who agitate so fervently for inflation are overlooking a substitute likely to receive a more cordial reception. Nearly 10 billion dollars are estimated as tied-up in closed institutions and these limiting withdrawals to small amounts. Their release would be a popular form of inflation.

Suppose that only 50 per cent of these funds were made available by the year end. Five billion dollars would be seeking a market of some sort. And it is hard to imagine anyone criticizing the return of their money. And it is just as hard to imagine anyone's dwelling it unhealthy. Real confidence would result.

Judged purely on tape action the shars market appears to be away overbought. This is regarded as resulting from easerness or greed by public buyers who were afraid inflation would come along so suddenly they might be cheated of a chance to make a dollar. They rarely win.

A reaction of some noticeable extent should be had before next week. It is on this that people who are out of stocks are counting as a chance to get back in. But don't take our time. In some circumstance, it should not hold at 96-98 it will not look any too good

It was with a great deal of satisfaction we read the Washington dispatch of Bernard W. Kilgore to the Dow-Jones news service. His comments were widely quoted throughout the various financial centers and it pleased us to see that the NRA is in a test period, as we do.

If Washington commentators are impressed with the idea industrial profits are uncertain why should the toll soon. . . . Wide fear will force enough buying to put prices up they lack the firmness engendered by natural purchasing. . . . Only the latter would come from released bank deposits.

PIERCE-ARROW HAS PROFIT

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 28 (AP)—The Pierce-Arrow Motor Car Co. today reported a net profit for the second quarter, ending June 30, of $47?0 compared with a net loss of $878,000 for the same period in 1932.

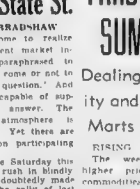
The company, reorganized from the Studebaker Corp., last Saturday, also reported that operations for the first six months of the year resulted in a net loss of $?54,?35, against a net loss of $1,072,334 during the same period last year for both the company and its subsidiaries.

BETTERMENT IN TRADE, STOCKS SUMMARIZED

Dealings on the Security and Commodity Marts Become Lively

RISING

The week brought distinctly higher prices for major farm commodities a notable rebound in stock quotations, continued employment expansion, gratifying railway financing and freight figures, extraordinarily cheerful sales figures from motor and refrigerator manufacturers, official statistics showing a [illegible] gains in exports and imports, [illegible] a drop in failures to the lowest since 1926. A significant rise in crude oil prices, indications that quickened progress is finally being made in launching large-scale public construction, another rise in rubber and intimations of a looming advance in iron.



B. C. Forbes

Then, strictly financial, monetary developments stimulated bullishness.

The Federal Reserve increased its government bond purchases 200 per cent, and from high sources came information that this method of further helping banking conditions—and, it is hoped, credit—will be aggressively followed. Coupled with Secretary Woodin's remark that President Roosevelt and he contemplate no currency inflation, the inference drawn is that the government's present plan is to "inflate" by methods less unpopular than the much-discussed and much feared "starting of the printing presses."

Low as interest rates have ruled in Wall Street for thoroughly-collateraled loans and for gild-edged commercial and banking paper, there was still further easing of rates towards the week-end.

A renewed fall in the International value of the dollar, to almost one-third off," was hailed by speculative Wall Street and Chicago traders, though the interest is not accounted an unmixed blessing in conservative circles here.

Dealings on the security and commodity exchanges became more lively. Transactions on the New York Stock Exchange for the year approximate 800,000,000 shares, nearly double the volume at this time last year. The view is spreading that higher prices will be needed to induce the bull to crook, if not through revival in business, then by means of outright inflation.

America's delegate to the international wheat conference declares that the agreement reached means "dollar wheat" for the United States.

Latest retail trade reports afford genuine comfort. Instead of August having brought the pronounced lull many expected, most centers, including New York, announce increased buying for almost all varieties of merchandise.

All this has strengthened hope that recovery will go ahead "after Labor Day."

Pacific Coast Pay Has Sharp Decline

San Francisco, Aug. 28—Industry and trade in the 12th Federal Reserve district continued to expand absolutely in July, and activity in practically every important line [illegible] but at a less rate than in June and higher than in July, 1932, states San Francisco Federal Reserve Bank. Employment conditions improved substantially.

Bonds in Payment of Taxes "Illegal"

Jacksonville, Fla., Aug. 28—A court of three federal judges has ruled that a St. Petersburg city ordinance authorizing acceptance of bonds in payment of municipal taxes is unconstitutional and has issued an injunction restraining the city from receiving such payment.

Arrest in Decline of Steel Orders Nears

An arrest in the decline of orders for the steel industry is seen as nearing by the magazine "Steel" in its weekly review today. In the meantime, steel consumption continues its decline, a further reduction of three points in the steel works rate to 48 per cent accurately gauging the downward trend during the past week states the magazine "Steel."

With seasonal influences operating in practically all consumer fields, the market still lacking the stimulus of higher prices and the government's public works program maturing with disappointing slowness, it appears this trend will extend into September. Sometime in that month the downward swing is expected to collide with a general rise in prices, which, steelmakers hope, will arrest the decline.

Uncertainties over the NRA's effect on the steel industry are being dissipated. Steel-makers are filing [illegible] which will apply under their code for the remainder of this quarter. It is indicated that on many heavy finished steel products no changes will be made from present official levels, though advances are anticipated in some of the light products.

The first price increase in raw materials for immediate effect and application under the code is $1 a ton on pig iron in all sections of districts, likely to be followed by producers in southern and other markets.

Steels iron and steel composition [illegible] up 8 cents to $30.10, finished steel composite holds at $47.50 while the scrap composite is up 4 cents to $11.58 on an adjustment on compressed scrap at Pittsburgh.

Devaluation of Franc Growing Possibility

Paris, Aug. 28 (INS)—The suddenly increased possibility that France must have to devaluate the franc to balance its budget worried Paris financial circles today.

Grave concern was expressed following the announcement of Budget Commissioner Lucien Lamoureux that he expected the 1931 budget would have a deficit of 8,000,000,000 francs (about $310,300,000 at current rate).

The budget head made no suggestions as to how the deficit would be met, and thus served to strengthen predictions devaluation

Shoe Price Advances Seen as Inevitable

Leading authorities in the shoe industry today declared that an advance in retail prices of shoes from 20 per cent to 30 per cent, which will mean anywhere from 50 cents to $1 a pair over the spring levels, is inevitable between September 1 and November 1 as a result of the sharp rise in raw materials and adoption of codes in the leather and shoe industries which will boost labor costs.

While manufacturers of shoes and wholesalers have been of late revising their prices upward to some extent to compensate for hide and leather prices, these advances have not yet found reflection in retail prices, as the stores have been selling off their merchandise based on the lower costs. The full effect will be felt when it comes to replacements.

It is pointed out that hides have advanced this year from 41 cents a pound to 15 cents, a rise of over 211 per cent. This of itself necessitates a radical advance in shoe prices and will be the main reason for the higher levels foreseen this autumn. This would account for an advance of 10 to 50 cents a pair on the average in the retail price of shoes.

In the instance the advance in labor costs and overhead due to adjustment to code specifications relative to hours of labor and minimum wages, it is figured, will necessitate an advance of 10 to 20 cents a pair in the price of shoes.

PRICE CHANGES FOR LEADERS ARE NARROW

New York, Aug. 28.—Price changes for pivotal shares were generally narrow in the last hour on the New York Stock Exchange today.

Stocks, while dull and uncertain, were inclined to ignore a sharp rally of the dollar in foreign exchange dealings and an easier tone in grains and cotton.

With sterling down 11 cents at one time, there was little selling pressure noticeable in the more active shares and some issues even moved up a point or more. Wheat jagged around a cent a bushel at Chicago, but was fairly steady at Winnipeg. Foreign bonds followed European exchange drops and domestic categories were moderately irregular.

Automobile company shares, led by General Motors, received wholesale play there was and the majority recorded gains of fractions o more than a point.

Small advances were held by United Aircraft, Aviation Corp, Du Pont, Standard Oil of California, Baltimore & Ohio, Allied Chemical and Deere. Allied Chemical lost a point, Goodyear was off about as much and U. S. Rubber, Santa Fe, Western Union and many others were a bit lower. The closings were virtually unchanged.

Volume ruled lighter than Friday's in Mid-Week, although numerous losses of a point or so were shown by leaders, with some specialties showing more. Among these American Safety Razor was down 1, Hazel-Atlas 2¾ and Air Reduction 2½. American Can lost 2 points.

Setbacks of a point or so came in Delaware Hudson, Industrial Rayon, Johns-Manville, National Dairy, Illeri, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, U. S. Steel, Commercial Solvents, J. Case, Ingersholl Rand and others. Allied Chemical was off 2 points.

Such shares as United Aircraft and General Electric held recessions to fractions.

Owens-Illinois and Woolworth went against the trend with a point gain, while Deere and Case were scored by International Business Machines, Continental Can, Pullman and a handful of others.

Sales to 11 a. m. approximated 120,000 shares.

In the second hour motors and rails showed some firming tendencies. Chrysler & Motors was traded actively at a price unchanged from the previous closing, then churned around up a point or two. U. S. Smelting was off over a couple of points, as Anaconda was off over a point. Baltimore & Ohio was traded at fractional advances.

Net losses were reduced by a number of issues. U. S. Steel sold off a half a point, American Can a point, and only fractional dips from Friday's close showed in du Pont, Westinghouse, Union Carbide and Chemical.

Utilities were comparatively quiet. Leaders, including Consolidated Gas, Public Service of New Jersey and American Water, were steady to fractionally lower. Call money renewed at one per cent.

Sales to noon approximated 1,010,000 shares.

The third hour saw the tone change to one of irregularity. General Motors was off a point, but gains appeared for American Telephone, Eastman Kodak and United Aircraft. Studebaker was up a point.

Air Reduction was off over two points, but elsewhere recessions were largely confined to fractions to a point.

Estimates of the New York Cotton Exchange service that the world supply of all growths of the staple for the season would be about 1,239,000 bales less than last season were not surprising to Wall St. While the American cotton supply this season promises to be smaller than the previous season, it was pointed out that the production of foreign cottons probably will be larger.

Sales to 1 p. m. approximated 1,440,000 shares.

The fourth hour saw trading very quiet with price changes small and mixed. Amerada was up better than a point. Auburn Auto gained 1¾ points, along with Hecla Pirate, Hercules Powder advanced a point. American Telephone was traded up fractionally. U. S. Steel was traded at fractional net concessions from Friday's finish.

Indications that monetary inflation, for the moment, is not being considered by the administration, apparently caused the American dollar to raise sharply today in foreign exchange dealings. The British pound sterling dropped 10% cents to a cable rate of $4.85¾.

Sales to 2 p. m. approximated 1,650,000 shares.

Cotton Sells Off, But Later Rallies

New York, Aug. 28 (INS)—Cotton futures showed losses of 30 pts. a bale today on pressure of liquidation influenced by the sharply lower dollar rate for sterling. With Liverpool about in line with our figures, the market opened off 5 to 16 points and then moved moderately higher in the later dealings. July prices were off 7 to 1 points with October off 7 at 9.60, December off 1 at 9.77, March off 9 at 10.05 and May off 9 at 10.21.

Wheat Starts Off, But Stages Rally

Chicago, Aug. 28 (AP)—Scattered selling orders accumulated over the week-end, found support for grains lacking in enthusiasm today and prices generally turned downward. Trade was light and easily influenced, with the markets apparently awaiting leadership.

Wheat started ¾-2¼ cents lower than Saturday's finish, but later recovered a portion of the loss.

STEWART SALES NEARLY DOUBLE LAST YEAR'S

Chicago, Aug. 28.—A 12-mil[illegible] sale of the Stewart Warner Corporation are making the rate of increase established in July during almost double those of last year, it was stated today by Joseph E. Otis, executive vice-president.

Mr. Otis said although the adoption of NRA codes in the leading factories increased employment [illegible] concurrent with the [illegible] hours had resulted in a decrease of over 10 per cent in [illegible] this has been partially made up by increased efficiency.

"The strengthened morale among our employees has been reflected in a greater efficiency throughout all departments," Mr. Otis stated.

"The improvement in unit production, therefore, should mean that we will be able to absorb a part at least of the actual increase in our cost resulting from adherence to the code of labor and material expense not over 15 per cent greater at present. We are not going to profiteer under the code, because we are genuinely sincere in our belief that if industry follows the President's program in spirit it will result in continuation of the present improvement in general business."

Chicago, Aug. 28.—The Chicago & North Western [illegible] not expect to [illegible] after deficits.

Indications are that the net profit for the first six months will be somewhat less than $1,000,000, due largely to the [illegible] trend the week just ended [illegible] hope that the seasonal downspend of the [illegible] several weeks has ended.

Western [illegible] operating income of $1,830,[illegible] & A. [illegible] ated five cents a unit month by a [illegible] increase. In July, 1932, [illegible] ated 41 cents a unit.

Sale of Necessity Goods Is Off Little

Contrary to ideas widely held [illegible] consumption of food clothing [illegible] purchased [illegible] ness [illegible] merchandise by the mass of the American people has not declined in the [illegible] quantities of goods more than about 10 per cent, [illegible] standard of living and [illegible] saving and [illegible] has declined more sharply since 1929. These deductions were made by Arthur [illegible] R. Tebbutt, instructor in statistics at Harvard Business School.

A. & P. WINNERS ON TOUR

Under the personal direction of Franklin H. Smith of the Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., the boys who won the 14 county contests in the recent A. & P. Food Stores "Go to Chicago" contests left yesterday on first leg of their tour to the Century of Progress at Chicago.

Officials of the A. & P. Stores, including L. W. Thompson, vice-president, in charge of the Boston unit of the company, entertained the boys at luncheon at the University Club before the party entrained.

The guns from the Eastern counties are on the Westerner under direction of Miss Helen M. Potter, after a dinner at the Y. W. C. A. on arrival at Springfield. They were joined at Springfield by Miss Elizabeth MacDonald and the other girls.

Both parties will be guests of A. & P. at the World's Fair and will be particularly welcomed at the A. & P. carnival, which is proving one of the hits of the exposition. They will also be personally conducted to all points of interest on the fairgrounds and will visit the various exhibits and amusements. In Chicago, they will also enjoy many other features specially arranged for them.

FEARLESS JOURNALISM

(Silverton, Wash., Bruce.)

The party who stole our laundry off our front porch while we were away on a vacation certainly had their nerve. It consisted of a green shirt, a pair of underwear, bed sheet and pillow slip. They not only had their nerve, but probably needed it worse than we do. They were seen taking it and unknown. Before issuing a search warrant, we have this to say: We go to bed about 10:30 each night. If we do not find our laundry on the porch, some morning before next Monday, things are going to happen. This notice should be sufficient.

We were just hanging by our eyebrows and then some fellow comes along and steals all our clothes. What would you do?

TRIO KILLED AS TRAIN CRASHES INTO AUTO

Reports from various sections of the state today revealed that five lives was the toll taken yesterday by the heavy auto traffic brought out by a perfect summer Sunday.

The worst accident occured at South Uxbridge where three boys were killed when their auto was struck by a train at an unguarded crossing on a little-used road.

Another motorist lost his life when his car was sideswiped at Lakeville and overturned, and a woman passenger was killed in Arlington when she was impaled by a fence rail when the machine in which she was riding went out of control. In addition there were many injuries reported from crashes, with one man reported dying at Lowell.

The victims:

GORDON, Lovell V., 19, of 14 Pershing Ter., Springfield.

LEFOLEDIT, Lawrence, 17, of Douglas st., Uxbridge.

WHALEN, Donald, 20, of 15 Willard ave., Springfield.

DI LUZIO, Mrs. Mary, 43, of 38 Summit st., Arlington.

MACKEY, Joseph, 21, of 197 Lockwood st., Providence.

The first three victims were killed when their light coupe was ground into splinters by a Hartford-bound train at a grade crossing in South Uxbridge.

The crossing is not guarded by gates but is said to be a well alarm to anyone approaching a train.

Mrs. Di Luzio was riding in a car driven by Albert De Marco, 34, of 66 Clark st., Everett. He told police his car went out of control at Forest and Summer sts., Arlington and crashed through the wooden guard rail, dropped 10 feet down an embankment and overturned. He was held on a technical charge of manslaughter. Mackey was driving a car at Lakeville when a speeding machine crowded it off the road. It overturned pinning him beneath.

Crazed Bear Routed by Girl and Dog

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 28 (US)—Mary Polachuk saw her mother being mauled by a crazed bear while berry-picking on the Reddit road, 80 miles east of Winnipeg. While the huge beast was tearing at the prostrate body of Mrs. Polachuk, quick-witted Mary seized a switch and struck it across the face of the bear. Her dog, Bervey, barked at the raging animal. Fearing for three cubs that accompanied her, the bear made its way into the woods with the family. Mother and daughter reached the safety of their home.

Poison Rum Fatal to Trio in New York

New York, Aug. 28—A 60-year-old woman and three men are dead here after drinking what police described as poison liquor.

The dead woman was Anna Coma. Her body was found in a lot near a shanty. Within a short radius of the shanty were found the shack, and Michael Miscali, 55. the brother of John Pennington, 47; Harry Williams, 45, proprietor of

Marshfield Robbery Victim Still in Coma

Plymouth, Aug. 28—Roger Mason, 39, of 60 West Acre, was found beaten and robbed while the State police raid was in progress at Marshfield Fair Friday night, was removed from Jordan Hospital, where he has been unconscious, to Boston City Hospital. He was found in a booth concession at the fair.

Proves Wedding to Film Director Void

Los Angeles, Aug. 28 (US)—That marriage ceremony, which Frances Tate and Cullen Tate, film director, went through in Lower California Jan. 4, 1930, was not legal, Miss Tate obtained an annulment when she convinced the court the witnesses of the ceremony were Americans who had failed to comply with the Mexican law requiring witnesses to be residents of Mexico.

Orders From the General

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

NRA turned out to be the world's largest information booth.

Gen. Gen. Johnson on the phone for five seconds and it's like four years at college.

So many orders have been issued that a man is afraid to use salt and pepper at the same time.

We all wanted to do the right thing. But then the codes are printed we are scared to.

Only the farmers don't seem to be affected this year. Their crops are either in the barn or plowed under. They can play checkers until the free seeds bloom again in the mail of 1934.

The five-day week is a success on Saturdays and Sundays, but the rest of the codes have us puzzled. And we know you can't catch eels with the hook on your thumb.

And how about the bankers who were ordered to be generous? Call one and you will find his 44-hour week was up before you got there.

Five Dollar Prize Recipe for Monday

MRS. M. G. ROBINSON
Brunswick Ave., Gardiner, Maine

QUINCE PRESERVES

Pare 1½ lbs. of quince, cut in eighths or thinner. Remove core and gritty part and put in a kettle with 1 qt. boiling water and 1 cup of sugar. Boil gently for an hour, or until the preserves are a decided red. Let stand over night, drain and add ½ cup of sugar to the syrup. Bring to the boiling point and pour over the fruit and let stand for one or two hours. Drain again and add ½ cup sugar, bring to boiling point, pour over fruit and allow to stand one or two hours. Repeat until the fruit is the desired color. Let stand for two days, drain and boil the syrup down until it gives the jelly test. Place the fruit in clean, dry jars. Add hot syrup to fill the jars. Partially seal and process in a water bath two or three minutes. Remove from the bath and seal at once.

PINEAPPLE RICE PUFF

1½ cups rice
2 qts. boiling water
1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon plain gelatin, dissolved in a little cold water
1 qt. milk
1 cup cream
1 small can pineapple, or sliced cut very small
1 tsp. vanilla

Cook the rice in the boiling water in a double boiler until very tender. Drain and rinse water in the rice is not tender when it has simmered in the water. Add the milk, heated, and the sugar. Mix well. Add the dissolved gelatin and stir until it is dissolved. Remove from the fire and add the cream, fruit and juice and place in refrigerator to become cool. When ready to serve, stir well, fold in the pineapple which has been drained of most of its juice and fold into the whipped cream. Makes a filling, luscious dessert with rich, golden brown macaroons.

CHOCOLATE TRIFLE

Attractive and Easily Prepared

Make a sponge cake from your favorite recipe and bake in a round pan instead of a tube pan.

Filling: Soften 1 tbsp. gelatin in ¼ cup cold water. Beat the yolks of 4 eggs until light. Add 1 cup sugar, ¼ cup each of two oranges and the rind of one of them, and the juice into double boiler and cook until thick, stirring constantly. Add the gelatin and cool. Whip the cream stiffened. Set aside to chill and when partially congealed fold in half the cream. To the whites of the four eggs add ½ tsp. salt and beat until stiff. Add gradually 4 tbsp. powdered sugar and fold into whipped gelatin mixture. Remove a piece from the sponge one inch from the top of the cake. Hollow out the inside and fill with the custard mixture. Replace piece. Ice the cake with remaining cream. Arrange boiled prunes, cut in halves, whole orange sections and chopped nut meats.

Davis and the War Debt Cancellation

What is this report that comes over the wires from Washington?

Norman H. Davis, our perambulating Ambassador, to return to the disarmament wake at Geneva, with stops at Paris and London on the way, to consult the views of French and British financiers and politicians?

It bodes ill for American interests, for the consistency and respectability of American foreign policy and for the Administration which manifests so strange and dangerous a toleration toward this discredited envoy and appointee of its own.

We do not specifically refer to the facts brought out in the recent investigation conducted by the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency, showing the connection—of long standing and intimate—between Davis and the House of J. P. Morgan & Co. His borrowings and his repeated participations in the broadcast largesse of these international bankers are matters of record—undenied, unexplained, undefended.

Nor do we dwell upon the demand heard in Congress, during the session just closed, for his recall or resignation. The judicial comments on some chapters in his business career, quoted from the official court reports and read into the Congressional Record, called for more in the nature of a reply than the silence which our roving Ambassador has seen fit to maintain. Silence is not invariably golden.

We have been optimistic enough to hope that such reticence on the part of both the Administration and Mr. Davis might be an indication that the end of his usefulness was mutually perceived and that he would be permitted to fade out of the picture, thus solving the embarrassment of the Administration and relieving the apprehensions of the public.

But, apparently, we are in error. The "Roving Ambassador" is to rove some more.

In London he will have an opportunity to resume his contacts with that other diplomatic freak, Amb-ass-ador Bingham, who was thrown into such transports by the silly declaration of Davis in Geneva that the United States was prepared to abandon its traditional adherence to neutrality, its policy of the freedom of the seas, its resolute avoidance of European brawls, and to do, at last, what it had steadily refused to do in the past—involve itself in consultative pacts, the designation of the aggressor in conflicts remote from our shores and interests and join in coercive measures directed at friendly powers.

Announced as an epochal step in the development of American policy, it turned out to be only a little accident—a man losing his balance and falling out of the window. It was not without humor—so quickly was it done for and sunk in the very moment of its launching.

Public recollectionin of it will be refreshed, however, and public indignation will be rekindled by the news that Davis, not yet stripped of his quaint status as Ambassador-at-Large, is returning to the scene of his faux pas, bent upon further disservice to his country and new betrayals of its interests.

He is to discuss debt cancellation with our European debtors!

The report is current in foreign diplomatic circles at Washington that this agent of the international bankers—this favorite of the House of Morgan—has intimated to European statesmen that the Roosevelt Administration will agree to the drastic reduction of Europe's war debts!

Here is a report that cannot be passed over in silence! What truth is there in it? The country has a right to ask. It has a right to know.

And there is basis for more than suspicion!

It cannot be pretended that disarmament, under the conditions of today in the world, presents a subject upon which any agreement whatever is possible. The Disarmament Conference is as dead as Caesar. This is admitted by every frank and honorable statesman who has participated in its sessions.

Shall it, nevertheless, be used as a cover and pretext for other discussions wholly unrelated to the cause of disarmament —cancellation of Europe's war debts to America, for instance?

That seems to be the program—and a very disreputable program it is!

The Administration should be on its guard. It should have no part in it. Some other way should be found for letting down —and letting out—Mr. Norman H. Davis and his international banking clientele.

You're All Wrong

And So Were We

If you can answer these questions correctly you know more than Einstein:

1—Which is farther west, Los Angeles or Reno?
2—Is Jacksonville, Fla., east of Cleveland, O.?
3—Is any part of the Pacific Ocean east of New York?

Well, you are wrong on all three.

Reno is 100 miles west of Los Angeles.

Jacksonville is west of Cleveland.

And the Pacific Ocean is east of New York at Arequipa, Chile.

Just Folks

Heat

Cloudless sky and pitiless sun
And acres of harrowing to be done;
All day long that the corn may grow
The farmer toils in it, row by row.
The south breeze blows across dunes of sand
Great waves of heat from a burning land.
Hour after hour in the blazing sun
The reapers work till the harvest's done;
Like molten god seems the ripened grain
Where the land breeze blows, but all in vain.
For heat, like fire, is a pitiless thing
Which mocks at man and his suffering.

In the open fields where the wheat is laid
A man must work without cooling shade,
And I often think as I pass him by,
As the sun beats down from a cloudless sky,
How little we know of the pain that's borne
For the bread we eat and our yellow corn.

As It Should Be!

One of the wisest emergency measures yet taken has been the decision of the Federal unemployment relief administration to provide funds which will put idle teachers to work, reopen schools that the depression has closed, and give some 3,000,000 children their rightful chance for an education.

As Harry L. Hopkins, the Federal Administrator, said in announcing the decision:

"Where schools are closed or terms are reduced to a month or two a year, despite increased enrollment, we have a great paradox.

"It is the expectation of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration that this paradox can be righted, in some part, by permiting the teachers to give their services on the basis of their relief needs."

Japan's Rulers Foment Hatred of America

—By James T. Williams, Jr.

Japan is under the dominance of a government today that is doing its utmost to inflame the Japanese people against the United States.

In Japan the government controls the press, and the Japanese press for many months has been broadcasting mendacious matter designed to arouse the animosity of all Japan against America.

Denials of these falsehoods carry little weight because we know the Japanese people know that the government speaks through their press, and they trust the government.

This year the problem worked out in the manoeuvers of the Japanese fleet in the vicinity of the Bonin Islands involved a theoretical attack by the United States fleet upon Japanese territory.

The manoeuvers extended south of Japan proper to the area lying between Formosa on the west and the Bonin Islands on the east—midway between Japan and the Philippine Islands.

These manoeuvers have just ended with the grand review of the fleet off Yokohama where it was inspected by Emperor Hirohito with one million of his loyal subjects assembled to witness the impressive spectacle.

A GREAT SECRET

Generally the problem assigned the fleet at these annual manoeuvers is guarded as a great secret. This year it was broadcast to the Japanese people. They were led to believe that they are in real danger of an attack by the United States. This helps to fire their animosity against men and things American.

Recently there was issued by the Navy Department of Japan an extraordinary manifesto-extraordinary because it abounded in the most mendacious misrepresentations of facts that are of official record.

In this manifesto the Japanese navy set up the preposterous claim to unconditional and exclusive sovereignty over the former German colonies in the Pacific—some 1,600 islands which were occupied by Japan when she entered the great war on the side of the Allies. But the Allies were unable to defeat Germany without the assistance of the United States.

The administration of the former German colonies in the Pacific north of the equator was entrusted to Japan under a mandate, subject to specific conditions stipulated in the Treaty of Versailles. By the terms of this mandate, Japan was required to report from time to time to the League of Nations upon her administration of the mandated territory entrusted to her.

SAME OLD GAME

Japan, having been indicted by the league for her aggressive warfare in Manchuria, has given notice of her intention to withdraw from the league. And the Japanese navy department puts the world on notice that Japan's withdrawal from the league will not affect her mandate, but will leave the former German colonies in the Pacific north of the equator under the exclusive sovereignty of Japan.

Japan is playing the same old game for the same old stake for which she has been striving ever since 1894, when she eliminated the Chinese navy as a factor in the balance of power in the Pacific.

And the stakes in this game are the conquest of Asia and supremacy of the Pacific.

At the next naval conference Japan will demand equality in every class of combatant ship with the American and British navies, recognition of Japan as the sovereign of Manchuria and of the former German colonies in the Pacific north of the Equator, and admission of Japanese immigrants to the United States, Canada and Australia on a quota basis.

Japan got so much from the United States at the Washington and London naval conferences under the Harding and Hoover administrations that she is apparently determined to ask for more.

Fortunately, however, for the national honor and national security of the American people, there is a Roosevelt in the White House today who knows Japan and how to meet her challenge.

Human Side of the News

Strange Chinese Court—Witness Takes Oath in Blood of White Chicken

By Edwin C. Hill

The Chinese have a marvelous aptitude for minding their own business. But they like to mind it in their own way, being individualists of a very rugged brand. Sometimes they call in the boo how doy, the hatchetmen and settle disputes with 45 calibre Colt pistols. But in ordinary times they employ tehir own peculiar courts, for they don't understand the white man's complex legal system.

It is an interesting experience to attend a session of the Supreme Court of New York's Chinatown. Its official name is the Chinese Consolidated Benevolent Association and it sits on certain nights on the top floor of an old building hard by the Bowery.

The association came into being when Chinatown was founded. Since there was then no Chinese consul in New York, it handled all consular business, looked after Chinese welfare generally, and did charitable work in the Chinese colony. When New York's Chinatown grew larger and its business spread, all transactions concerning restaurants, laundries and property were made before the association, which in turn announced the impending deal on posters and billboards in the streets of Chinatown and in the Chinese newspapers.

It became a court, adjudicating between buyer and seller. To this court come the delegates from the two great tongs, the Hip Sing and the On Leong, bringing a variety of cases which would mean long wars and bloodshed if they could not be settled peaceably before the Chinese Consolidated Benevolent Association tribunal.

The big meeting room is plainly furnished, almost bare except for rows of chairs facing the president's table. His table is upon a low platform, and behind it is a big blackboard covered with Chinese writing and symbols—a list of the cases to be heard. At a small side table sits a plump court clerk, thumbing a thick ledger of rice paper, and dabbing at the pages now and then with his writing brush. One by one the tong delegates arise and present their cases. They speak in sharp, clear voices, with sing-song intonation. Nearly all the cases involve money, disputes over rentals or the purchase price or laundries.

The room is fogged with cigar and cigarette smoke as the business of the court drones on hour after hour. Off the big room is a closet containing a gas stove and a boiling tea kettle. A big teapot is kept filled and hot in an iron bucket of boiling water. As the arguments proceed there is an endless procession back and forth from the courtroom to tea closet.

The dramatic moment comes at midnight, when one of the litigants, a very modern-looking young Chinese, makes a short, angry speech with a catlike snarl. The interpreter shakes his head and confides laconically: "He no like". . . And one wonders, as one exits down the dark and narrow stairway and out into the clamorous Bowery if the Chinese gentleman who is so plainly vexed with the proceedings of the court would try for his rights some night with one of those big pistols which are said to make all men equal.

By EDWIN C. HILL

The judge gave a Scotch verdict and fled to his chambers. The Chinese mind works on a different plane from the mental operations of us Western barbarians. If a Chinese witness refuses to take oath on the Bible there is nothing much the court can do about it. The Chinese is within his rights.

Some years ago there was a murder case in the criminal part of the New York Supreme Court. The principal witness refused to swear upon the Bible. The interpreter explained that the witness would drink the blood of the throat of a newly-slain chicken. The startled judge could scarcely believe his ears, but he was game. Business would most surely tell the truth if he was permitted to take the chicken blood oath. So all hands adjourned to the cellar of the Criminal Courts Building, the dignified judge holding up his silken robe as ladies used to hold up their skirts in the puddle past when crossing a muddy street. After him trailed the jury and the bailiffs, the lawyers, witnesses and the gleeful reporters.

A spry young assistant district attorney went out and caught a rooster—a white one, the color being important. But before the court could be executed he was awayed from the law and made a wild break for liberty. Everybody chased it about the cellar except His Honor and the man on trial for murder. Finally the rooster was nabbed and beheaded. The witness took the oath, dabbing a few drops of the blood of the white rooster upon his forehead and promptly proceeded to give evidence that sent a Chinese hatchetman to the chair.

A few years ago one of these laundry rows started a first class tong war. This writer, accompanying the police squad into a Chinese gambling house in Pell st. It was as dark as the inside of a hat and the narrow stairway and steep beams over hall and stairway, floor and stairs were slippery with fresh blood. Blood dripped from the landing above with a horrible monotony, drop by drop. In one room above stairs were six dead Chinese, their throats cut, or stabbed in the heart. Wholesale murder by steel. In that room was death and darkness and a yellow canary singing its heart out as the electric lights went up.

"King barks so," she explained, "the landlady says we will have to send him away. We would rather have him killed." King stood with his head on one side, pathetically unconscious of crime, so pleased with life, so near to death. "We can't kill him," explained the patient grey haired attendent, "but we will find him a good home." A face brightened, there was a convulsive hug and the girl stumbled away crying as though her heart would break. King looked after her wonderingly.

I never pass S. Jay Kaufman, a columnist himself once, that he does not pilot me to something unusual a few steps away—then prance right on. This morning it was a shill in a Coney Island bus in Times Square—a shill who was the image of the old-time barker, all traditions the sort who scraped apple parings in his top drawer. In dark broadcloth with boiled shirt, square-cut derby and Franz Joseph side whiskers he could have passed even in Wall street for the late George F. Baker.

Through boom time and depression John and Cristo have perhaps been Broadway's most successful head-waiters. On Long Island or in the Roaring 40's their spot is packed. They have teamed together, off and on, since days at Reisenweber's. Steeped in the psychology of the wisest street, they hold out the hoop and the crowd leaps through. Their success at The Plantation, with Florence Mills, in the Winter Garden building is an example. For the first four weeks no one was admitted and the orchestra played to an empty room. Everybody who came was told there was no more room. Thousands were turned away. The fifth week they had police reserves. It made a huge fortune.
